SNEATH-HERRINGTON

One of the most brilliant social events which have occurred in Napanee took place on Thursday morning the occasion being the wedding of Miss Caroline Mary (Lena) Herrington, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Herrington, Piety Hill, to Mr. Thomas d'Arcy Sneath, of Toronto. The ceremony took place in St. Mary Magdalene Church at eleven o'clock, Rev. W. E. Kidd, M. A., Vicar, officiating. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Moore. The bride who was given away by her father wore a charming little frock of white satin, with bodice and three tiered minaret skirt of snowy nixon edged with crystal, while over her face was a beautiful veil of Lunerick lace bordered around the brow with pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of lily-of-the-valley and pink orchids. The bride's sister, Miss Eleanor M. Herrington, was maid of honor and wore a silk gown of lemon green crepe de chene. The bridesmaids were Miss Luella Hall and Miss Dorothy Walker, of Toronto. The former wore rose pink brocaded satin with lace, the latter nattier blue brocaded crepe de chene and lace. The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore large hats of black velvet and chantilly lace and carried quaint round bouquets of pink Killarney roses bordered with lily-of-the-valley and fern. The groomsmen were Mr. E. R. Wigle, of Kingsville. The ushers were Dr. G. Garnet Greer, of Peterborough, Hubert Ryan, of Kingston, E. W. Woods, of Peterborough, and H. P. Lovell, of Montreal. The groomsmen and ushers are fraternity brothers of Mr. Sneath. During the signing of the register Mr. Dan Cameron, of Belleville, sang "Because" by d'Hardlot. After the wedding breakfast at the residence of the bride's parents, the newly married left by the 1.17 train for the west, bearing with them the best wishes of Napanee's citizens, a large number of whom were at the station to wish them bon voyage. The large number of presents received attested the high esteem in which both the bride and groom are held, and we join with them in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Sneath many years of happiness and prosperity.

Council Chamber,

November, 3rd, 1913.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor W. A. Steacy in the chair.

Present—Reeve Osborne and Councillors Alexander, Walters, Simpson, Graham and Carson.

The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the Duncan Detective Agency, Toronto, stating that they had opened a suite of rooms at 212-313 C. P. R. Building, Toronto, and if the town should ever be in need of a private agency, they would be pleased to be of any service to the town.

Ordered filed.

A communication was read from G. C. Wright, engineer, Kingston, enclosing the tender of McKelvey and Birch, Kingston, $150 for pipe line for use at the disposal works, and asking the council to authorize the acceptance of same.

Referred to Streets Committee with power to act.

A communication was read from H. B. Sherwood in reference to the remission of taxes on the Andrews estate, situated on Piety Hill.

On motion of Councillors Simpson and Walters the communication was referred to the Court of Revision.

A petition was presented to the council by the required number of persons asking the council to take the necessary steps to have the Local Option Ry-Law voted upon at the same time of the holding of the municipal elections.

On motion of Councillors Simpson and Carson the petition was referred to the town clerk to verify the names of the persons appearing on the petition, and if found correct, he to prepare the necessary by-law.

Coun. Carson informed the council that Mr. John Mack, proprietor of the opera house, wanted permission to erect a porch over the entrance to the opera house.

On motion of Reeve Osborne and Coun. Carson the request was referred to the Printing and By-Law Committee to investigate if the granting of the request would be contrary to the town by-law governing these matters.

It was repeated to the council that the Medical Health Officer had called together the streets committee, and those parties interested in the construction of a sewer on the north side of Bridge street, between East and John streets, to discuss proposed building of said sewer. An argument had been entered into whereby a sewer would be constructed on the north side of Bridge street, commencing at the property of Mary A. Duffett and running westward to John street, the parties interested agreeing to pay them proportion of the cost of constructing said sewer.

Moved by Reeve Osborne, seconded by Coun. Carson, that the council approve of the agreement between the town and above said parties interested and that when the said petition is properly signed, the Mayor and clerk be authorized to sign it on behalf of the town. And that the work of construction be done under the supervision of the Streets Committee. Carried.

THE PLOWING MATCH

A RECORD ATTENDANCE AND A FINE DAY.

The Lennox and Addington Branch of the Ontario Plowmen's Association held their second annual plowing match on Mr. W. H. Hunter's farm on the Selby road on Wednesday afternoon. An unusually good list of prizes and a spirit of emulation among the farmers drew a large field of entries. Twenty-eight farmers and farmer's sons appeared with their teams and plows to compete. A very large number of spectators were present following the progress of the plowing and judging for themselves the excellence of the work being performed. The officers and directors of the Lennox and Addington Branch deserve a large measure of credit on the success of their second annual match.

JUDGES REMARKS.

The Lennox and Addington Branch of the Ontario Plowmen's Association was one of the best I have judged this year for being the 2nd annual match. Last year when I was here there were only 8 plows at work and today there was 28 plows at work, and the work was of general good character. The stubble was excellent. The lands were well formed, plowed fairly even and generally finished well. The sod was also plowed very well considering the kind of plows used. I would recommend some of these good plowers to buy one of the Verity or Cockshutt special for this work. Now in conclusion I would say that this Plowing Match reflects a great deal of credit to the Officers and Directors of this Association, also to that energetic Sec. Treas., and District Representative of the Department of Agriculture who is doing such good work for Lennox and Addington.

Wishing you ever success in the future, I remain,

JAS. MCLEAN, Judge.

Dignified French Paper Describes Latest In Canine Fashions.

Fashions for dogs seem to be receiving almost as much attention as the proper adornment for the fair sex in Paris. Recently there was a long serious article in one of the most dignified papers of Paris on the subject, What Elegant Dogs Should Wear. Quite seriously, the writer avers that leather collars may still be worn, but that they must be the same color and material as the leash. He continues to say that the most fashionable collars are of brass or silver, many of them mounted with precious stones, turquoises, sapphires and rubies.

Artistic combinations for dogs is dealt with at length. For instance, he says that dark brindled bulldogs should have a red leather collar with silver gilt mounting, while a white brindled dog looks much more chic in a white collar with turquoises. The big bristle collar, once so popular, is now a thing of the past, and is not tolerated in the most exclusive circles of the dog world.

He says that for Perkinese, Japaneses and King Charles spaniels collars should be of worked silver, very light and supple, and of fine mesh, fastened with a tiny padlock. Patent leather collars make a very striking effect, but what the writer calls a "ravishing combination" is obtained in the use of dog harness for Poms, encircling the neck and breast. Greyhounds look best in light-colored coats with stripes to match, we are told.

For motoring, dogs should wear English stuffs and fur coast. Plaids of dark shades are considered most suitable. What must be an awful blow to the over-solicitous woman dog owner is the statement that for the smart dog it is no longer considered fashionable to have their coats made to contain a pocket for a handkerchief. Sweaters are most chic for the seaside, especially for short-haired dogs, and the rainy season has brought out, so the writer prettily puts it, "dainty canine mackintoshes, artistically gathered in at the neck and legs."

He has refrained from expressing any opinion on diaphanous or slashed skirts for dogs, but he concludes by saying that every well-bred dog of any social position worth while should have at least two pairs of boots and a pair of "Wellington" for outdoor wear. Also velvet or satin pumps for use indoors.

No wonder some of the old-timers are wondering "where are we going to!"

PURITY and QUALITY

These two essentials explain the great increase in demand for our bread since the installation of our new electrical bread mixer.

We have now a thoroughly up-to-date and sanitary bread plant, including bread mixer, sanitary steel troughs, etc. As a result we are able to place before the public a pure, clean wholesome, smooth-grained loaf of bread.

We ask all housewives who desire purity and quality in their bread to try a loaf of this bread and be convinced of its superiority.

HUERTA ORDERED OUT

U. S. Demands That He Must Resign Without Loss of Time.

He Must Not Put Gen. Blanquet or Any of His Own Friends In the Presidential Office—Doubt Exists as to Huerta's Action—Holds Conference With Diplomats—Rebels to Attack Zacatecas.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 4.—President Huerta has been told he must resign the Presidency of Mexico without loss of time, and that he must not leave as his successor Gen. Blanquet, his Minister of War, or any other member of his official family, or of the unofficial coterie whom he might be expected to control.

This ultimatum from Washington was conveyed to President Huerta through his private secretary, Senor Rabago, by Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American charge d'Affaires, acting under instructions from the State Department.

Senor Rabago presented the memorandum to his chief late Sunday, but up to last evening President Huerta had returned no answer to it, and, as far as could be learned, had guarded its contents from almost all his official and intimate councillors. Those who learned of the Washington note regard Gen. Huerta's position as one in which he would be forced to give one of two answers—refusal point blank to comply with the demand, possibly going so far as to hand the diplomatic representative his passports, or the elimination of himself officially.

Those most intimate with the President insist that the latter course will not be taken, for many reasons, chief among which is that such action would be tantamount to submission to the rebels. Official Mexico is no longer in doubt that the Washington administration favors the rebel cause, and is convinced that this is the means adopted by President Wilson and Secretary Bryan to assist Carranza to win.

Gen. Huerta summoned to the national palace last night the diplomatic corps, but for what purpose was not revealed. Three of the ministers, those of Germany, Norway and Russia, were absent. They have been in Vera Cruz, where they were in conference with President Wilson's representative, John Lind, who is understood to be fully conversant with the latest representations from Washington.

Changes in the military situation throughout the country yesterday included, according to the report, the advance of the rebels to attack Zacatecas, but the Government believes that the garrison there is sufficiently strong to resist an attack successfully. Queretaro, capital of the state of the same name, on the main line of the National Railway, south of San Luis Potosi, is surrounded by rebels, and practically in a state of siege. North of San Luis Potosi, a new method has been adopted by the rebels to prevent the operation of trains. Placards addressed to railroad employes have been posted, notifying them that they will be hanged if they attempt to run the trains. As a result, the men are refusing to take out the trains.

Suffragettes to Have an Army Just Like Carson's.

Sylvia Pankhurst Says Sir Francis Vane Will Lead the Militants and Calls For Volunteers—Absolutely In Earnest, She Says—Doctors Make Cat-and-Mouse Bill Possible Says Christabel.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Revelations of suffering undergone by Miss Sylvia Pankhurst recently greatly perturbed her mother, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, when she received a letter here yesterday from her other daughter, Christabel.

The letter stated that Miss Sylvia again had been subjected to forcible feeding after being "starved within an inch of her life."

Miss Christabel asks if her mother can do anything to interest American physicians to bring pressure on their British colleagues without whom, she says, the "cat-and-mouse" torture would be impossible. The doctor, she says, watches the starving patient weakened to the last limit of safety and then scientifically but forcibly feeds them back to life again.

"The doctor is, in fact, the only one who has any power over the suffragette, and he is not only policeman but torturer," continues the letter.

"It was the international medical congress that saved you and Annie Kenney last summer, so evidently the doctors of other lands have some influence."

To Organize Army.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst in a speech at Hackney announced that a volunteer army to defend the suffragette movement would be raised in the east end of London. "Look at Sir Edward Carson," she said. "We have to do precisely the same thing. We have to get an army, and now the chance of having it is coming next Wednesday at Bow Baths. Sir Francis Vane, an officer of the British army who fought in the Boer and other wars and who is going to be our commander, is to be present at the meeting to organize our first training corps. If anyone here wants to join will be or she give in their names? Sir Francis Vane has several offices to act with him. It is no joke. We are absolutely in earnest. We have only got to get our army trained and we shall get the same treatment as Carson."

CORD CONTRACT MADE.

Commission To Get $50,000 a Year From One Firm.

TORONTO, Nov. 4.—All details of recent contract yet made by the Hydro-Electric Commission completed yesterday, when an agreement was signed by the T. Eaton Co. to supply of 2,000 kilowatts, but 2,500 horsepower, of electricity from the commission. Eaton Company will use this to augment the supply now generated in its own plant, and will pay the Hydro-Electric Commission about $50,000 a year for the additional electrical energy needed in the big store and factory.

The hydro-electric system is immediately strengthened, within the course of a few weeks the commission hope to be able to supply the big store with the chain of power and other buildings now used for power.

The contract secured from the Eaton Company is the largest the commission has ever obtained, with the exception of the agreement to supply for the dredging operation in Toronto Bay.

Spanish Officer Executed.

PRID, Nov. 4.—A firing squad of Spanish troops at dawn yesterday executed by shooting Capt. Manuel Iz, a Spanish army officer found guilty by a court-martial of the murder of Don Garcia Jalon, a wealthy owner, last May. Detachments of the regiments in garrison witnessed the execution.

Sanchez was tried and condemned for the crime as a sequel to the confession of a woman, Louisa Iz, said to be his daughter, who confessed to twelve years' imprisonment as his accomplice.

Oil Wells Ablaze.

HAREST, Nov. 4.—A loss estimated at $5,000,000 has been caused by fires which are spreading from well to another in the petroleum district of Moreni.

The fires started Sunday with the onset of a large well, and spread through the whole valley and along the sides, which were yesterday a scene of flames. Over twenty-five wells were alight, all burning furiously. Fighting the fires has become difficult as most of the wells are unattended.

Preparing For Parcel Post.

AWA, Nov. 4.—The efforts of the Postoffice Department are still directed towards the establishment of the parcel post system on a regular basis, though the date is not absolutely certain.

A schedule of rates has been prepared tentatively, but will require approval of the Postmaster-General.

A great deal of detail is necessary in connection with the regulations governing the system.

employees have been posted, notifying them that they will be hanged if they attempt to run the trains. As a result, the men are refusing to take out the trains.

WILD WEST IN NEW YORK.

Steers Stampede on Fifth Avenue—One Man Is Killed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—In a fusillade of shots fired by the police to check the mad rush of sixteen steers which escaped from a railroad stockpen on the west side early yesterday, one man was killed and one wounded. The dead man, George Beattie, toppled from the seat of an express wagon when a stray bullet pierced his brain. Another bullet bored through the foot of Walter Wangenheim, a waiter.

That no more persons were injured either by the zipping bullets or by the steers was due to the fact that there were few pedestrians abroad. One steer crashed into an automobile truck, putting it out of commission. Another bowled over a policeman, bruising him badly. One fled into Madison avenue and was shot dead by the police in front of the home of Cardinal Farley.

POPE WELL PLEASED.

Increase In Catholic Deputies Satisfactory to Vatican.

ROME, Nov. 4.—It was said at the Vatican yesterday that the Pope had expressed satisfaction at the election of six more Catholic deputies in the second ballot of the Italian general elections, and also that he was pleased at the defeat of the candidates in Rome supported by the coalition of Radicals, Republicans and Socialists which has been in control of the municipality for so long a time. The defeat also of the former priest, Father Remolo Murri, leader of the Catholic Democrats, was noted with interest.

Mayor Nathan of Rome will shortly convene a meeting of the aldermen of the city, at which it is expected he will present his resignation. As a municipal election is to take place in June next year it is assumed that the Government will in the interim appoint a royal commissioner.

Train Hits Huge Boulder.

LACROSSE, Wis., Nov. 4.—Passenger train No. 58, on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, was wrecked near Genoa, Wis., yesterday, when the locomotive struck a boulder half the size of a box car and weighing at least 100 tons, which had been dislodged by recent rains and rolled down the bluff on to the track. Engineer James M. Pratt, Lacrosse, was probably fatally injured. Five others were injured, but not fatally.

HOUSE IS CRUSHED.

Two Killed When Wall Falls on a Frame Dwelling.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 4.—The entire side of a four-storey brick storehouse in North Front street collapsed early yesterday and crashed through the small frame dwelling-house of John Hughes, immediately adjoining, as a result of which two persons are dead, three perhaps fatally injured, and another seriously hurt.

The building was known as the Loveland storehouse and was used for storing bales of rags and tobacco. First reports said that an explosion had caused the accident, but it was later shown that faulty construction of the building was probably responsible for the collapse. It is said that the structure, which was comparatively new, was built of brick that had been in another building, and that the foundations were insecure, being laid on an ash dump. City Building Inspector Clark yesterday started an investigation.

New Zealand Cheesemaker Exposes Fraud In London.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Inasmuch as the instance is by no means a solitary one, the following facts will be of considerable interest to Canadian cheesemakers:

A grocer at Sunderland yesterday made a curious discovery. When cutting through a cheese his wire encountered some hard substance and he was obliged to finish cutting it with a knife. In the centre of the cheese he found a small tin box, containing pennies, and a request that the finder would communicate with the New Zealand cheese manufacturer, informing him as to whether the cheese was purchased as New Zealand or Canadian. The tradesman has complied with the request, telling the New Zealand man that the cheese was sold to him as Canadian produce.

FOUND A HIDING PLACE.

Then They Got a Big Surprise When Daylight Appeared.

The father of Joseph Altscheler, the writer of war stories, was a Prussian who came to this country a few years before the war between the states broke out and settled in Barren county, Kentucky. By reason of his foreign birth the elder Altscheler was not subject to draft by either army when hostilities began, but his southern sympathies made him obnoxious to a group of bushwhackers who, posing as Federals, infested the vicinity of the Kentucky-Tennessee state line.

One starless, moonless night in the summer of 1863 a neighbor came with the word that the bushwhackers were on their way to kill Mr. Altscheler and another resident of the vicinity who had been outspoken in his approval of secession. It was not certain, the messenger said, which road of two the marauders would take to reach the homes of their proposed victims; but it was certain that they would be along soon.

Mr. Altscheler and the other threatened man gathered up a blanket apiece and went into the woods to hide. In the darkness they speedily lost all sense of direction. For an hour they wandered about, seeking a suitable camping place. Finally they came to a spot that was free of trees and where the ground felt smooth underfoot. So they spread their blankets and went to sleep, secure in the belief that no bushwhacker could find them there.

The rising sun, shining in their faces, waked them. They sat up and looked around. They had been asleep all night at the only place where the raiders could not have failed to find them had their plans been carried out—at the forks of the county road.—Saturday Evening Post.

Diameter of a Fine Wire.

Should you ever find it necessary to obtain the diameter of a fine wire, it may be done in this manner: Wind it carefully around a piece of pencil, one layer for an inch or so, that each turn is touching the previous one. Then measure exactly an inch along the wire and count the number of turns in the inch. You then have the information. Thus, if there are eighteen turns the wire is one-eighteenth of an inch diameter.

type, at a cost of $2,000,000. This is the same type which was denounced by Mr. Borden's armchair naval critics as "obsolescent"; it is to-day approved by the British Admiralty. Premier Massey announced this would be followed by other vessels, to be under the control of New Zealand in times of peace, and turned over to the Imperial Admiralty in time of war or emergency—precisely the programme laid down by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1910.

Australia abandoned the tribute in 1909 and to-day has such a fleet that on October 22nd last the cables announced that the Admiral of the Australian Navy, with H.M.A.S. "Melbourne" as his flagship, flying the Australian flag as well as the British white ensign, took command in Australian waters.

New Zealand has a dreadnought cruiser, has abandoned her tribute policy and is preparing to build and establish her own fleet as part of the Imperial Navy.

Canada started in 1910, under the Laurier Government, to establish a similar fleet. That start has been deliberately ruined by the Borden Government, the ships practically scrapped and the crews dismissed, while Mr. Borden has tried to revert to the tribute policy which has been abandoned by more progressive Dominions.

Had the Laurier Government continued in power, Canada to-day would have an adequate fleet, and be able to hold its own with Australia and New Zealand.

With the Borden Government in power, Canada, in naval matters, is farther behind than it was five years ago, with little prospect of anything being done until a Government which can act for country instead of party is elected.

POOR TORY MEMORIES.

FORGET FORMER DENUNCATIONS OF LIBERAL TARIFF REDUCTION.

Conservative papers are still declaring that the Liberal Government did nothing to reduce tariff taxation during its fifteen years of office. They must have forgotten the speech made by Sir Charles Tupper, as Leader of the Tory Opposition, in 1897, when the first Fielding tariff was introduced and he almost wept in Parliament imagining "the wail, the pitiful wail" of the Canadian manufacturers, and saw the ruin of their industries with the reduced tariff. They must have forgotten the British Preference which cut duties by 33 per cent. and met with so much veiled opposition from the Tories, who put "the interests" ahead of their Imperialism. They must have forgotten to subsequent Fielding tariffs in spite of violent Tory opposition. They must have forgotten that the Liberal Government lost office owing to a conspiracy of the high tariff Conservatives with the Anti-Imperialist Nationalists, financed by the interests, whose profits were swollen by high protection in order to prevent the government from reducing the cost of living in Canada by cutting off the duties on the necessities of life.

The Liberal party represents a progressive movement toward tariff reduction for the benefit of the taxpayers. The Borden Government is so at the mercy of "the interests" that it must stand pat for high tariff. The the Dominion Premier never once referred to his pre-election promises regarding natural resources. When Leader of the Opposition Mr. Borden used to declare that if he ever headed a Canadian Government, within twenty-four hours of assuming office he would turn over to the Western Provinces their natural resources. So far as has yet come to light, this is how Mr. Borden has "turned over" these natural resources:

Macdonald "Homestead" valued at $375,000, turned over to S. J. Donaldson, Conservative Whip in the Saskatchewan legislature, for $10

Gimli Shore lots, promised to that town in perpetuity as a park, valued at $15,000, and secretly turned over by the Government to Mayor P. Tergesen a former Liberal now converted to Toryism for $752.

An effort to turnover part of the Stoney Mountain Reserve near Winnipeg, to be given to favored friends as pasture land—an attempt only frustrated by the activity of the Liberals.

As leader of the Opposition, Mr. Borden declared that natural resources were part of the Province's property. As partner with Hon. Mr. Rogers at the head of the coalition Government, he considers natural resources, like Government offices, part of the partisan machinery designed to reward his friends and punish his enemies.

ATTACK PROVINCIAL RIGHTS. ONE REASON WHY LIBERALS AMENDED HIGHWAYS AID BILL.

In a vicious article headed "The Foul Blow to Roads" on October 22nd the Toronto Mail and Empire abuses Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Senate Liberals for "putting the whipcord around the neck of this Government policy."

All the Liberals in the Senate did was to demand that the money be divided fairly amongst the Provinces and that the constitutional provisions for the protection of provincial rights be observed.

The Mail and Empire demands: "If the Dominion Government ought not to be trusted with Dominion funds who ought to be? Ought it to be Provincial Governments who are in no way responsible to the Dominion Government who votes the money?"

The British North America Act (the Canadian Constitution) gives the answer. It says:

92. "In each Province the Legislature may EXCLUSIVELY MAKE LAWS in relation to matters coming within the Classes of Subjects next hereinafter enumerated; that is to say:

"Local Works and Undertakings other than such as are of the following Classes.

(a) Lines of Steam or other Ships, Railways, Canals, Telegraphs, and other Works and Undertakings connecting the Provinces, or extending beyond the Limits of the Provinces.

(b) Lines of Steam Ships between the Province and any British or Foreign Country.

(c) Such Works as, although wholly situate within the Province, are before or after their Execution declared by the Parliament of Canada to be for the general advantage of Canada or for the Advantage of two or more of the Provinces."

Highways have never been declared works "for the general advantage of Canada." They are thus purely Provincial affairs, and the Dominion Government cannot constitutionally interfere with the spending of money upon them. All it can legally do is to give the money to the Provincial Governments. That is all the Liberals demand.

The foreign lady's bath is a sort of gata day for the neighborhood. If frequent, the event is discussed by the neighbors across the way. All of this is well calculated to make the occasion of one keen embarrassment for the foreign lady.

At the end of the book are printed the lines: And John Tate the Younger doo make this Paper thynne, That now in our Englysch this boke is printed Inne.

Oil for British Navy.

The public declaration made in Parliament by Mr. Churchill of his belief in oil as fuel for warships has caused somewhat of a sensation. He predicted nothing less than the abandonment of coal as fuel and the substitution in all cases of oil, which he declares not only makes for greater speed but ensures a substantial saving of labor. There are now 150 vessels burning oil and 100 destroyers built and building which will use only oil fuel.

Atmospheric Voids.

SOME FAMOUS SONGS

MELODIES WHICH LIVE DEEP IN THE HEART OF THE RACE.

"The Old Arm Chair," "Afton Water," "Alice, Where Art Thou," Have Stirred the Emotions of Generations of English Speaking Men and Women — Author of "The Watch on the Rhine."

I love it, I love it, and who shall dare To chide me for loving that old arm chair? I've treasured it long as a sainted prize; I've bedewed it with tears and embalmed it with sighs; It is bound by a thousand bands to my heart; Not a tie will break, not a link will start. Would ye learn the spell? A mother sat there And a sacred thing is that old arm chair.

The chair that can never be filled again by mother brings us back in memory to the long past, happy home of our childhood, when our family, full in number, were there, making life sublime — free from care and strife of the world, shielded by the mother's care, so precious to every human heart. No matter how high the pinnacle of fame we may have reached—in after years, long after the departure of the loving heart into the great beyond, we bow low still at that sacred thing, the vacant chair.

Eliza Cook was just what her noble poetry would lead you to imagine as the author of the Old Arm Chair, whose exquisite lines have sunken into the hearts of almost every living soul at some time. We read of her as being a frank, brave and warm-hearted girl, about 20 years of age when she penned those lines. She was born in London in 1817 and died in Wimbledon, Sept. 23, 1889.

What child can forget the pride and pleasure with which they sang Afton Water at school? The verse was written by Robert Burns, who died miserably poor at the age of only 37.

The traveler can scarcely think of leaving Scotland without a visit to the tomb of Robert Burns and his Highland Mary, to whose memory those beautiful lines were penned. It is with a feeling of deep sorrow that we stand beside the Afton Water, the little brook where the two with a Bible between them pledged the love for ever. They never met again, for Mary died soon after at her home. It is customary in Scotland for lovers to pledge themselves beside a brook with a Bible, as did Robert Burns and his Highland Mary the brook meaning eternity and the Bible loyalty forever.

The beautiful music and tender sentiment of "Alice, Where Art Thou?" was at first refused by the publishers for the small sum of $25. The sale afterward ran up in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Joseph Ascher, the wonderful composer and musician, with a promising future sacrificed his career to the vortex of Parisian society life while he was musician to the Empress Eugenie. The words were written by Wellington Guernsey, the Irish poet, who was the son of an officer in the British army. He was born at Mullingar, Ireland, in 1811, and died in London in 1885. We recognize him now as most wonderful at his art, for a more beautiful verse could not be conceived than this exquisite thought. He was celebrated for his art, but his

THE WOMAN SPY.

She Must Take Her Own Chances and May Not Involve Her Government.

As subtle as Delilah, as consequenceless as Lucretia Borgia, as ravishingly beautiful as Venus, as daring as a soldier, as keen as a diplomat, as brainy as a military genius, such is the woman spy, whose machinations threaten every naval and military office in Europe. The whole service is honeycombed with the insidious designs of these dashing, pretty women on the hearts of susceptible subordinates in the service. The bravery of these women is realized when it is understood that, although they are in the secret service of their country and under its salary, their acts are disavowed by their home governments and they must take their own chances of arrest. A spy is a spy. No government can claim immunity for a sub of doing this secret work.

Yet there are never lacking beautiful adventuresses who are willing to risk their lives in this perilous work. Every war brings into prominence their names. But in Europe, where a state of neutral neutrality exists all the time, their work to ascertain military and naval secrets, details of fortifications, of armament, of new naval construction, extent of forces, new arms, ammunition and mechanisms. In short the women spies are expected to white belled pangolin trains the owl and bats and sleeps during the day. When sleeping it is up into an object about the size of a croquet ball, and in this position its plating of pointed scales is about as easy to attack or as a hedgehog. The sharp scales give it somewhat the appearance of an "animated fir cone." Its food appears to be white but in captivity it thrives on raw meat and eggs. ## KICKED ON THE TIPS.

All it is a mammal, a stranger ask make an offhand diagnosis would only call it a lizard.

The Waiter Thought the Rule Should Not Work Both Ways.

"My bill at the cabaret restaurant on Broadway was $25, and when I gave the waiter a tip of a dollar he frowned."

The speaker was a banker from Duluth. He continued warmly:

"What are you frowning about? I asked the waiter. 'Isn't that a generous tip for a few minutes work on your part?'"

"In New York," the man answered, "the rule is always to give a tip of 10 per cent. Your bill, sir, called for a $2.50 tip. So, naturally, I feel a little aggrieved. But it is easy to see, sir, that you are not a New Yorker, and so it can't be expected that you'd know the rules."

"Well, I pocketed the waiter's insult, and the next time I was in that neighborhood I dropped in on him again. This time I was alone, and, not being hungry, I only ate a $1.35 meal. When it was over I handed the waiter a tip of 11 cents. You ought to have seen his face. It was worse than before."

"It's all right," I assured him. "It's according to the 10 per cent rule that

When Women Knew Not Golf.

Correspondent sends the Glasgow l some anecdotes of that period, long ago, when women knew g of golf. One lady, making thetic conversation at dinner, a keen golfer: "I often see you red coat. Do you need many o play golf?" A younger lady e knew exactly how the game ayed. "They get what they call er to hunt about in the grass y find a round stone, and then it it into a rabbit hole." A third ho had evidently enjoyed a nerv- y of the game, said: "It is play- two men. One is a gentleman e other is a common man. The n man sticks a ball on a lump of ad the gentleman knocks it off!" minster Gazette.

and the next time I was in that neigh- borhood I dropped in on him again. This time I was alone, and, not being hungry, I only ate a $1.15 meal. When it was over I handed the waiter a tip of 11 cents. You ought to have seen his face. It was worse than before.

"It's all right," I assured him. "It's according to the 10 per cent rule that you taught me. If a man's bill is ex- orbitant that makes no difference, ac- cording to the rule. Well, then, when a man's bill is small, it should make no difference, either."

"The waiter glowered at me. He shook the 11 cents in his palm sar- castically. I said, as I rose to go:

"And, by jove, it won't make any difference either. If you waiters insist on your 10 per cent for large amounts then you've got to take it for small amounts, too. At least, by jingo, you've got to take it from me. I'm from Du- luth, but I know my way about."

The Duluth banker sighed heavily. "But the fact remains," he said, "that ever since that waiter called me down I give 10 per cent on big amounts like a fool and like a fool I give 20 to 30 per cent on small amounts."—Minne- apolis Journal.

he was musician to the Empress Eu- genie. The words were written by Wellington Guernsey, the Irish poet, who was the son of an officer in the British army. He was born at Mullingar, Ireland, in 1811, and died in London in 1885. We recognize him now as most wonderful at his art, for a mere beautiful verse could not be conceived than this exquisite thought. He was celebrated for his art, but his favorite popular songs were Mary Bane, and Alice, Where Art Thou.

She is far from the land
Where her young hero sleeps,
And lovers are ro ad her sighing,
But coldly she turns from their gaze
and weeps
For her heart in his grave is lying.

The above is a sweet and plaintive song written by Thomas Moore, who sang his own songs with wonderful effect. The above song was written 2 ound the famous Robert Emmett and his beloved Miss Sarah Curran. Washington Irving tells us her story in one of his writings, The Broken Heart.

From the Bohemian Girl was taken "Then You'll Remember Me." The composer was M. W. Balfé. During its first production of 100 nights the opera had no more popular song than this one. It is noted that the opera was played at Vienna in three theatres at the same time. A young tenor by the name of Harrison first sang this famous number and was recalled again and again. The piece since its creation has been sung in all types of amusements as a favorite. It was in- troduced with startling success in East Lynn, one of the most beloved dramas ever known in America or Europe.

The sweet words of "Thou Art Like a Flower" were immortalized by Anton Rubinstein with his splendid musical setting, who will ever be re- membered as the greatest composer of his time. Russia, the land of his birth, owes to him to-day that Rus- sia has a position in the national music school of the world. He organiz- ed the conservatory at St. Petersburg in 1862; Rubenstein was born in 1829 and died in 1895.

Max Schreckenburger, a manufac- turer living in Wurtemberg, wrote the words to "The Watch on The Rhine," the national hymn of Germany. This poem was selected by the musical composers as being eminently suited to a true martial air. Patriotic Ger- many always is and when in 1840 the French were threatening the left bank of the Rhine, he presented it as an expression of love for the fatherland. At the time of the Franco-Prussian war a national hymn was needed, and at this appropriate time the words and music were combined. The war was fought and won with the music of The Watch on the Rhine sounding in the ears of the combatants. Carl Wilhelm, composer of the music, was a pupil of the famous violinist, Louis Spohr. In 1871 the Emperor presented Wilhelm with a pension for life. He did not, ho- ever, live long to enjoy the gift, as two years later he died and his skill- ful pen became idle forever.

risk their lives in this perilous work. Every war brings into prominence their names. But in Europe, where a state of armed neutrality exists all the time, it is their work to ascertain mili- tary and naval secrets, details of forti- fications, of armament, of new naval construction, extent of forces, new arms, ammunition and mechanisms. In short the women spies are expected to learn everything of the inside work- ings of the military and naval estab- lishments of the hostile power. They may have unlimited funds to spend and they may get the information in any way they see fit, so long as they do not involve their governments. They get high pay, but they risk their lives.

There was Rose Patrovich, the tall, beautiful, ravishingly lovely Russian girl, who has not been heard of since the war with Japan. She was a tourist in Manchuria at the time of the war and displayed a girlish inter- est in everything that was going on. A Japanese officer fell victim to her wiles. Maddened by love for her he was about to place at her disposal in- formation regarding the strength of the Japanese forces and certain plans and defenses, when another Japanese officer became suspicious of the at- tachment between the Russian beauty and the soldier. One morning Rose and the officer were summoned before the commandant. Neither has since been heard from.

Sometimes they are successful and get away with the information, leav- ing their informants to suffer. Only a few weeks ago George Herbert Parrott, a gunner in the British navy, was heavily sentenced for giving away naval secrets to a foreign power. He is conceded to have been the victim of a spy, Margaret Tyrrell, whom he met in a London music hall.

Jeanne Renee, alias Bourg, was a beautiful denizen of an opium den in Toulon, when she met Adrien Julien, a naval apprentice, of France. Work- ing on his sympathy and devotion Jeanne was on the point of securing secrets of French submarines, when the youth disclosed the attempted bribery. Jeanne is now languishing in a French prison.

There are hundreds of women, all wonderfully beautiful and attractive, who follow this vocation. They are to be found in all parts of Europe, living as peasants, waitresses, social leaders. Beauty, vivacity, culture are their principal assets. Without these quali- ties they cannot hope to win the con- fidence and affection of the men who best can furnish the information they seek.

The White Line.

The late David Christie Murray on one occasion told the story of the champion printer's error of his experi- ence to this effect:

"I wrote at the close of the story of 'Grace Forbeach': 'Are there no trou- bles now?' the lover asks. 'Not one, dear Frank, not one.' And then, in brackets, thus [ ] I set the words [White line]. This was a technical in- struction to the printer and meant that one line of space should be left clear. The genius who had the copy in hand put the lover's speech in type correctly and then, setting it out as if it were a line of verse, he gave me: 'Not one, dear Frank, not one white line!'"

Made It Easy.

An Irishman was one day engaged at stone breaking on the roadside and not being used to the work could not get on very fast. A friend of his who chanced to pass by as Pat was belabor- ing a large stone with renewed vigor, tried to show him the right way, and taking the hammer from him broke the stone with ease.

Said Pat, "Sure, now, and it be easy for ye to break the stone ather I have been softening it for the last half hour."—London Answers.

Rubber From Seaweed.

Motorists may now look forward hopefully to a possible reduction in the cost of new tires if the latest discovery as to the manufacture of rubber from seaweed proves capable of practical utilization.

A method has been found for manufacturing from seaweed a substance which, it is declared, can be used as an inexpensive substitute for rubber and leather. Tires for automobiles and carriages, it is said, can be very satisfactorily made of the substance and the manufacture of boots is now being considered.

The seaweed material is not only a great deal cheaper than either rubber or leather, but it is also believed to be more lasting and more sanitary.

So far the only uses which have been found for seaweed are as a fertilizer or for the abstraction of iodine. The dried seaweed has been used at times for the stuffing of mattresses and pillows, but this has not proved generally acceptable.

BIRCH LEADS.

Its Use in 1912 Greater Than

The popular idea that because the Land of the Maple must necessarily be the wood of first importance in Canada is incorrect, judged by the data given by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa.

There are three species of birch of commercial importance in Canada, black, yellow, and white, or silver birch. The former two have the valuable wood, but are confined to the eastern Canada, whereas the birch is found in every province of the Dominion, ranging from the tree-growth towards the north to the growing well within the Arctic in the Mackenzie River basin to the Yukon.

It is this wide range which contributes largely to its present importance, but the qualities of the wood promise a still greater use in the future, for it is a strong, hard grained wood which takes a fine polish and can be stained to imitate the more expensive woods, such as mahogany, cherry or walnut. Birch is an accidental form of cross-grain, somewhat similar to curly maple, and is highly prized for ornamental work. In another report issued by the Forestry Branch of the Wood-Using Industries of the Dominion, birch is reported as being in the manufacture of over a hundred different articles, from ship's to spools. As a fuel it takes first place and it is also the principal woods used in distillation, while its only objection as a pulpwood is that it is too heavy to be readily floated down the streams to the mills.

Birch also formed 28 per cent of the square timber exported from Canada in 1912, according to the statistics of the production of lumber, timber, lath and shingles for the year, which has been prepared by the Forestry Branch and will shortly be issued. The remainder was white pine. Until 1912 the export of square timber had steadily decreased since 1877, but last year showed a surprising increase, the quantity exported in 1912 exceeding that of the previous year by almost 50 per cent.

ONTARIO POLITICS

Bampton, an important Ontario town, has swung into the Liberal column with a Conservative majority of 136 turned into a Liberal majority of 24. The Township of Chingacousv has changed from a Conservative majority of 29 to a Liberal majority of 101. The Constituency of Peel with a Conservative majority of 710 in 1911 has now cut that majority to about 375, or almost one-half.

Those are the salient features of the Peel bye-election for the Ontario Legislature, held on November 3rd, with J. R. Fallis as the Conservative candidate and A. H. Milner as the Liberal. The result is a decided encouragement to the Provincial Liberal party, and coming as it does on the heels of the South Bruce victory in the Federal field, it strengthens the growing opinion that Ontario is becoming a Liberal Province again.

The vote in Brampton is most significant. It was here that the hottest fight of the campaign was waged.
Hon. W. H. Hearst and Hon. W. J.
Hanna, backed up by the Conservative organization and the inevitable support of the liquor interests, strove to increase the Conservative majority in the town. Instead of that the Conservative majority was wiped out and the Liberal majority substituted. The result reflects great credit not only on the candidate but on N. W. Rowell, K. C., M. P., who went to Brampton and explained fully his program of Social Reform which apparently swept the town.

It is evident that a large number of temperance Conservatives supported the Rowell policy of abolish the Bar.

FARMING IMPROVES.

More Scientific Methods Spreading Over Ontario.

In this refulgent summer time the farmers of Ontario are a busy lot. The crops are immense and they have to be garnered. Old Man Ontario has all he can do and more, in some counties. In fact, he is crying in vain for help. He misses the hired man. It may be some comfort to know that son and daughter, who responded to the call of the west and the lure of the city, are doing well
but he certainly does miss the hired man.

Without considering what has become of H. M., whither he has hiked nor why, it may be stated that his absence seriously cripples the farming industry of this most populous and wealthy province of the Dominion of Canada; that there is a decided dearth of operative help on the farms. The tide of immigration affords no relief.
Even the picked farm laborers selected in the Old Country by representatives of different Ontario county organizations are captured by Canadian city contractors before they reach Ontario's farms. All efforts to import laborers have proved failures.
Other and slower means are necessary to a satisfactory development of this wonderful contentment with country life and check the decline of the rural population is a matter of education.

FATAL AMBITION NOBLE AMBITION

It Is a Prime Necessity to a Successful Life.

—Of Right and Wrong Ambitions
—A Mistranslated Text—Its True
Import—The Lesson to the Church of Christ—Identical Lessons to All Mankind and to Angels.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Washington, D.
C., November 2.—
Of Pastor Russell's two discourses here today, we report
one. He too: for his text Philippians 2:6, 7, but corrected the translation, declaring that he had the support of scholarship in rendering it thus:
"Who, being in the form of God,
did not meditate a usurpation to be on an equality with God, but (contrariwise) made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant."

The Pastor declared that whoever has no ambition has not properly begun to live. Ambition implies appreciation of life's value—a fixed determination to reach the goal decided upon. He urged parents and teachers to assist young people in forming noble ideals and in determining which goal they will bend life's energies to reach. He also reminded them that many of those successful in life often declare how much they owe to such noble instructors.

Many Woe-Begone Faces.

Then the Pastor commented on the fact that in a crowd of a thousand people less than a hundred show by their faces and energy that they are pursuing an ideal, an ambition. In other words, nine-tenths of poor, fallen humanity lack the very main-
spring of life.

This lack of proper ambition, said
he, makes life a drudgery and also is a menace to our social fabric. According to the Bible, it is this nine-tenths of humanity that will pull down our civilization in a kind of blind fury—the awakening of an ambition which, not knowing how to exercise itself, will bring trouble upon all.

Worldly Ambitions Profitable.

The Pastor then showed that the ambitious tenth of humanity turn the wheels of progress by not only keeping their own minds occupied, but by giving employment to others. Men of ambition leading on to genius have helped mankind to larger conceptions of life and wider possibilities. Granting the necessity for legislation in restraining combinations of brains and money, let us never forget how much we owe to the ambitious men whom we seek to restrain from power to crush those of less ambition and capacity.

The Lesson of the Text.

The Pastor said that while the Apostle does not specify Satan in contrast with Jesus, yet between the lines of our text we may read that he had this thought in mind. Then
the speaker traced Satan's career as set forth in the Scriptures. Lucifer,
one of the most glorious spirit beings,
became possessed of a sinful ambition. Instead of the righteous ambition to serve and honor his Creator

popular idea that because Canthe Land of the Maple, the must necessarily be the hardect, judged by the data gather-the Forestry Branch of the tment of the Interior at Ottawa

re three species of birch of com-importance in Canada, the yellow, and white, or paper

The former two have the more ble wood, but are confined to n Canada, whereas the paper is found in every province of the nion, ranging to the limit of rowth towards the north and

To Further Agriculture.

Recently Ontario received $195,000
as her share of the new federal agricultural aid grant and it was decided to utilize the larger portion of the grant in amplifying and making permanent the summer school for teachers at the Guelph Agricultural College. The departments of education and agriculture are co-operating in holding of special courses for public and separate school teachers and inspectors and for science teachers in High Schools and collegiate institutes.

The trend in Ontario is towards the most scientific, and therefore the most profitable methods of extensive farming. The progress that has been made along these lines by the growers in the Niagara Peninsula is remarkable. Ten years ago the average farm in that district was of 100 acres worth from $100 to $200 an acre. Now the average holding is 20 acres worth $1,000 an acre.
The general adoption there of scientific methods has been brought about largely by the Niagara Fruit Growers' Association. It is an illustration of the benefits of co-operation, benefits that are also evidenced by the success of the several co-operative buying and selling associations in the district. Cooperation is working a revolution in the marketing of different products in Ontario. The government encourages it and the movement is certain of extension.

Co-operation among the fruit growers has been shown to encourage the best methods of production; to encourage economy, intelligence, enterprise and honesty in the packing, grading and marketing of the fruit and to bring fruit products more directly to the consumer from the producer. The pioneer co-operative egg marketing organization in Ontario county is another pronounced success.

The changes that are taking place in the rural life of the province are significant. There is greater interest taken in the Farmers' Clubs and a better attendance at the Women's Institute meetings. The government experts whose business it is to encourage the adoption of scientific methods are more appreciated. The great good work of the Ontario Agricultural College is better appreciated. Scientific knowledge in growing crops and raising live stock is more eagerly sought. The best methods of overcoming dry seasons and of preventing depletion of the soil's fertility are being followed. Low lands are gradually going under tile and the yields from them are being doubled.
Over 2,000 acres in Essex county alone has been tiled in the past year. Government representatives all over the province make free surveys to encourage the practice of tile under drainage and there is a growing appreciation of this method of doubling crop yields.

The big check on the farming industry of Ontario is the incurable dearth of labor. The men engaged in the business of agriculture, that science which Gibbons calls the foundation of all manufacturers, are helpless in the competition with other employers of labor here.

Utilizing Waste Products.

In Ottawa a machine has been perfected to make shingles out of discarded tin cans. After being rolled straight the can is put through a corrugating machine. Then it is put through a weatherproofing process, and then into a vat containing a substance like tar. The tin, while still wet, is dipped in asbestos which readily adheres to the tar-like coating. Shingles so made are said to be more flexible and lighter than the wood or corrugated steel articles, and they are produced in various colors. No nails are used in fastening them to roofs, the rolling process shaping them so that they are held in position by the corrugations.

Apostle does not specify Satan in contrast with Jesus, yet between the lines of our text we may read that he had this thought in mind. Then
the speaker traced Satan's career as set forth in the Scriptures. Lucifer,
one of the most glorious spirit beings,
became possessed of a sinful ambition. Instead of the righteous ambition to serve and honor his Creator,
he thought to have an empire of his own and improve upon the Divine order of things.

Lucifer's ambition led him to attempt to carry his program out in connection with mankind. Thenceforth he was known as Satan, God's adversary. He has been permitted to show the evil results of his chosen course. But soon he is to be restrained
a thousand years, while Messiah's Kingdom gives all an opportunity to return to harmony with God and to attain everlasting life. Ultimately Satan will be destroyed, together with all having his spirit.

The Logos Humbled Himself.

Then the Pastor contrasted the course of the Logos, the Only Begotten Son of God. He was the very personification of obedience and self-abnegation. Instead of meditating a usurpation of Divine authority,
He declared, "My Father is greater than I."

Man's fall brought opportunity to manifest loving obedience. As a perfect man was condemned to death,
so man's redemption must be accomplished by the death of a perfect man. Hence the Divine proposal that the Logos become a man, taking the sinner's nature, but not the sinner's weaknesses or sin, that He might become the Redeemer.

Attached to this proposal was the promise of a great reward—exaltation to the Divine nature, glory, honor and immortality. Jesus declared that by His faithfulness He had been rewarded with a place in the Father's Throne.—Revelation 3:21.

The Lesson of Humility.

Pastor Russell showed that the Apostle was seeking to impress the lesson of humility. Our Lord Jesus exemplified this in His course, not meditating for an instant to grasp Divine honor and association in His Father's Throne. And behold God's wonderful grace in exalting Him to the right hand of power!

The Father had made a similar proposition to the Church. If we become dead to the world, laying down our lives in obedience to the Father's will, we shall share our Redeemer's Throne.

Two Octogenarians.

Sir Thomas Roe, M.P., and Mr. Jesse

ans left in the British House of Commons. The oldest member in the House is Mr. Samuel Young, who is ninety-one years of age. Mr. Collings is eighty-two, and Sir Thomas Roe his junior by one year.

to $5.75; rough eastern stockers, $4.25 to $5.

Milkers and Springers

The market for fresh milkers and forward springers of good to choice quality was very strong at $60 to $100 each. The bulk sold around $70 to $80 each.

Veal Calves.

The calf market was firm at unchanged quotations: Choice veals sold at $9
to $10.50; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $7.50; common calves, $5.50 to $6.50;
rough eastern calves, $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs

Sheep and lambs were in demand at steady prices, as follows: Ewes, sold at $4.25 to $5.25; culs and rams, $2.75 to $3.75; lambs, $7.40 to $7.50; bucks, culled out, at 75c per head less.

Hogs

The hog market was easier. Selects fed and watered sold at $8.85 to $9, and in one or two instances $9.10 and $9.15
was paid. The f.o.b. price was from 25c to 30c lower than the above quotations.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 3.—At the Montreal
Stock Yards west end market, the offerings today amounted to 4000 cattle, 3000 sheep and lambs and 2000 hogs and 800
calves.

Owing to the continued limited supply of choice butchers' steers coming forward, the tone of the market for such was stronger, and full loads sold at a further advance of 10c per 100 pounds,
as compared with prices of last week.
An easier feeling prevailed in the market for common and inferior stock, and prices were 10c per 100 pounds lower than a week ago. Demand from American buyers for stockers and common cattle shows no abatement, and sales were made at $5.40 to $5.65 for stockers, $3.90 to $4.40 for common bulls, and $3.15 to $3.40 for canners. The shipments of cattle from Montreal to the United States from Sept. 1 to Nov. 1 were 598 carloads.
Butchers' cattle in good demand, with prices steady. Choice steers sold as high as $7.75, while some small lots of picked stock sold at $7.60 per 100 pounds.
Other grades sold from $6 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.

The tone of the market for small meats
was stronger, and prices for lambs show
a further advance of 25c, and sheep 25c to 50c per 100 pounds. Demand from butchers and packers here today was good, and sales of round lots of choice
western lambs were made at $7 to $7.25,
and ewe sheep at $4.50 to $5 per 100 pounds. The trade in graded calves for shipment to the United States continues active, and prices are unchanged, at 3½c to 4½c, while local butchers and packers are paying 6c to 7½c for choice,
milk-fed stock.

There was an easier feeling in the market for hogs, on account of the increased receipts, and outside prices were 25c per 100 pounds lower than a week ago. Demand was good, with sales of selected lots at $9.75, and straight lots at $8.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.50 to $7.75;
do., medium, $6.25 to $7; do., common, $5 to $5.75; canners, $3.15 to $3.40; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.75 to $6;
do., medium, $4.75 to $5.50; do., bulls, $5.75 to $6; milkers, choice, each, $85
to $90; do., common and medium, each, $75 to $80; springers, $65 to $70.

Sheep, ewes, $4.50 to $5; bucks and culs, $4.50 to $4.75; lambs, $6.50 to $7.25.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9.50 to $9.75.

Calves, $5.10 to $15.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Cattle—Receipts
23,000. Market good, steady; others dull.
Beeves, $6.70 to $9.65; Texas steers, $6.65
to $7.75; stockers and feeders, $5 to $7.50;
cows and heifers, $3.30 to $8.25; calves,
$6.50 to $10.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 38,000. Market weak.
5c lower. Light, $7.50 to $8.10; mixed,
$7.50 to $8.20; heavy, $7.40 to $8.25; rough, $7.40 to $7.60; pigs, $5 to $7.25; bulk of sales, $7.70 to $8.10.

Sheep—Receipts 52,000. Market slow.
10c to 15c lower. Native, $4 to $5; yearlings, $5.10 to $6; lambs, native, $6 to $7.40.

THE BACK OF YOUR HAND.

Its Vein Markings Different From Those of All Other Hands.

For several years a newer and better method than the world known Bertillon system for the identification of criminals was hoped for, and this has been found. It was devised by Professor Tamassia of the University of Padua, Italy. It consists in identifying the form of the veins on the back of the hand.

Strange as it may appear, it is nevertheless a fact that no two persons have veins on the backs of their hands which resemble each other's. Even the right and left hands of the same individual differ as a rule so widely that they bear no resemblance at all. This is very strange, seeing that we are anatomically so exactly alike in every other respect. Yet any one who examines the backs of his hands will see this for himself in a moment. No two hands are alike in vein markings, and this constitutes a perfect and infallible identification method for criminals, as the disposition of the veins cannot be altered without seriously mutilating the backs of the hands.

The right and left hands should both be observed when identifying a criminal, and the two hands would thus, to a certain extent, check off each other and add to the certainty of the identification. In order to apply this method photographs are taken of the backs of the two hands. These photographs must be very clear and accurate, and to insure this result the hands are placed in a pendent position for some time, when the veins will be found to swell from the extra blood pressure under the force of gravity. The veins are then painted over with some dark pigment, and the wrists are bound up by a tight bandage. In this way the veins can be made to stand out very prominently and can be photographed with ease.—London Chronicle.

CIVIL SERVICE POSITIONS.

How the List Has Been Swelled by the Various Presidents.

When recently Mr. Taft added a little over 36,000 fourth class postmasters to the classified competitive roll of the civil service and a little later 20,000 skilled laborers employed in the United States navy yards he brought the total of his work in that direction up to a high figure. The civil service act was signed by President Arthur on Jan. 16, 1883, near the middle of the Garfield-Arthur term. Here are the number of positions placed on the classified roll under that law by the various presidents:

Arthur	15,573
Cleveland (first term)	11,067
Harrison	15,598
Cleveland (second term)	38,261
McKinley	3,251
Roosevelt	34,705
Taft (to Oct. 16, 1912)	61,599

The Taft total includes the 36,332 fourth class postmasters who were classified under the order of Oct. 15 and the navy yard employees above referred to. The figures in the foregoing table indicate the number of positions placed on the competitive roll at the time of the classification, but each branch of the service covered by those orders, except that of Taft recently, has increased greatly since then.—Leslie's.

A Famous Old Race Horse.
Sire of more turf winners than any other living pacer, John R. Gentry, foaled twenty-four years ago, has been taken to Nashville, Tenn., where he will spend his remaining days in luxurious ease, being the property of the E. H. Harriman estate. Twenty years ago John R. Gentry took the world's pacing record in 2:04. That was a great day, and from then on he became a center of interest to the men who followed the race track all over the world. Later, in 1896, he again took the world's record in 2:00 1/4. Sixty-four sons and daughters of the famous horse have proudly faced the judges' stand, quivering from the race, while bits of blue ribbon were pinned to their harness.

The New Alloy, Steelite.
Some remarkable qualities are claimed for steelite, a new metal which is composed of 75 per cent of cobalt and the remainder of chromium. It may be cast and ground to a fine edge, is impervious to rust and the action of acids and highly flexible. As a lathe tool it will cut steel at the rate of 200 feet a minute, a speed at which steel would ordinarily burn. Certain modifications of this alloy will cut glass and even quartz crystals. Steelite is said to be particularly suitable for watch fittings.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 26.—We report one of Pastor Russell's sermons of to-day, from the text, "There shall be no more curse,"—Revelation 22:3. The Pastor declared that we are emerging from a horrible delusion; that the shackles of superstition are breaking from our minds. Our forefathers taught that to doubt the curse was to be damned, feared to for themselves. Satan helped, by to be our creeds, but to be us to them by direful. Well may we praise God for winning light of the New Day, is bringing us both spiritual and temporal advantages. Our Motion Picture Films.
Eleven thousand miles of motion picture films, $30,000,000 worth of automobiles, $1,000,000 worth of telephones and more than $100,000 worth of aeroplanes were among the exports from the United States in the year just ended. The United States is the world's largest producer of motion picture films, and the quantity exported during the year aggregates more than 60,000,000 feet, approximately 11,000 miles, or enough to stretch from New York to Atlanta.

The Chinese Music.
The Chinese have eight instruments for making their ritual music—the bell, the flute, the drum, the sonorous stone, the gong, the plume, the shield and the axe. The last three make no music, but are used as decoration or emblem in the musical ceremonies and are enumerated as musical instruments. In every ceremony there are always two instruments of each kind, sometimes as many as four or six, never an odd number, in order to emphasize the duality of the Chinese people. For instance, one drum announces the beginning of the music, and its mate strikes the last note; one bell calls, and its counterpart answers.

Science and Sound Fact.
"The working of the human mind when asleep are full of wonder," remarked a scientist who was paying a visit to an acquaintance. "Have you ever started up from a sound dreamless sleep, with every sense on the alert and with your whole being thrilled with a vivid yet indefinite feeling that something was wrong and instant action required?"
"Often," replied his hostess, "and in nearly every case I have found that I was awakened by the fumbling of my husband's key at the front door!"

Nevertheless He Got Her.
"You say my daughter loves you?" questioned the old man.
"I'm sure of it," replied the young man.
"Well, well," returned the old man, looking the young man over critically. "There's no accounting for tastes, is there?"
And somehow, although the young man knew that he ought to be happy over the possession of the girl, he couldn't help scowling and speculating on that remark of the old man's.

The Siege of The Seven Suitsors

By
MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright, 1910, by Meredith Nicholson

"It's beastly!" ejaculated Wiggins, coughing. "I didn't suppose Pepperton would put a flue like that into a house. He ought to be shot!"

"It is fortunate," said Miss Hollister, "that Mr. Ames is on the ground. He now has a case that will test his most acute powers of diagnosis."

The logs that had burned so brightly before the chimney choked still held their flames stubbornly, and I had advised against pouring water upon them, fearing to crack the brick and stone work. We were about to adjourn to the drawing room. Miss Hollister and the others had in fact reached the door, leaving me alone before the hearth. Then, as I stood half-blinded watching the smoke pour into the room and more puzzled than I had ever been before in any of my employments, the chimney, with a deep intake of breath, began drawing the smoke upward again. The flames caught and spread with renewed ardor, and when the trio still loitering in the hall returned in answer to my exclamation of surprise, the flue had recovered its composure and was behaving in a sane and normal manner.

"A swallow undoubtedly fell into the chimneypot and then got itself out again," suggested Cecilia.

"The logs must have been wet. The sap hadn't dried out yet," proposed Wiggins.

"The wood was as dry as tinder," averred Miss Hollister, not without irritation. "And one swallow does not make a summer or a chimney smoke. It must have been a changing current of air. I was reading a book on ballooning the other day, and it is remarkable how the air currents change."

"That is quite possible, as the air cools rapidly after sunset at this season, and that is bound to have an effect on the quality and resistance of the atmosphere," I replied sagely.

"Perhaps," suggested Mrs. Hollister, with one of those flashes of animation that were so delightful in her, "it was a ghost. The presence of a ghost in this house would give me the greatest pleasure. I should look upon a ghost's appearance at Hopefield Manor as a great compliment. If any reputable, decent ghost should by any chance take up his residence in this house I should give him every encouragement."

be I was sorry for it on her own account, and if it involved Hartley Wiggins my sympathy went out to him also. On an impulse I spoke of him.

"I was surprised to meet Hartley Wiggins here. He's a dear friend of mine, you know. I thought he had gone to his ranch. He left the Hare and Tortoise very abruptly a few nights ago just after we had dined together. He must be stopping somewhere in the neighborhood."

"It's quite possible. And there's an inn, you know. I fancy he drove over from there."

"I hadn't thought of that—the Prescott Arms I suppose you mean."

She nodded, but she was clearly not interested in me, and when I found myself failing dismally to divert her thoughts to cheerful channels I rose and bade her good night.

The servant who had previously attended me appeared promptly when I reached my room, bearing a tray, with biscuits and a bottle of ale. He gave me an envelope addressed in a hand I already knew as Miss Octavia's, and I opened and read:

The following I either detest or distrust, so kindly refrain from mentioning them while you are a guest of Hopefield Manor:

Automobiles.

Mashed potatoes.

Whiskers.

Chopin's Concerto in E minor (op. 11).

Bishop's Coadjutor.

Limericks.

Cats.

OCTAVIA HOLLISTER.

Before I slept I threw up my window and stepped out upon a narrow balcony that afforded a capital view of the fields and woods to the east. The night was fine, with the sky bright with stars and moon. As my eyes dropped from the horizon to the near landscape I saw a man perched on a knoll in the midst of a cornfield. He stood as rigid as a sentry on duty, or like a forlorn commander counting the spears of his tattered battalions. I was not sure that he saw me, for the balcony was slightly shadowed, but, at any rate, he was sharply outlined to my vision. His derby hat and overcoat gave him an odd appearance as he stood brooding above the corn. Then he vanished suddenly, though as he retired toward the highway I followed him for some time by the shaking and jerking of the corn stalks. I determined to make every effort to see Wiggins the next day and learn the exact status of his affair with Cecilia Hollister.

CHAPTER VI.

I Deliver a Message.

I was aroused at 6 o'clock the next morning by the sound of gun shots, and, springing out of bed, I beheld in an open pasture beyond the stable yard the indomitable Miss Hollister engaged in the pleasing pastime of breaking clay pigeons with a fowling piece. Her Swedish maid stood by with a formidable pad of paper, keeping score. A boy pulled the trap for her, and she threw up her gun and blazed away with a practiced hand. Her small, slight, tense figure, awaiting the launching of the target, the quick upspring of the gun as she sighted, and the pause following the firing of the shot, in which she bent forward rigidly watching the result, notes upon the flames that blazed merrily in the fireplace.

I suggested immediately that as I had come to Hopefield Manor to inspect the flues I should now be about my business, but to my surprise Miss Hollister cringed no interest whatever in the matter. Her tone and manner indicated that the condition of her chimneys was wholly negligible.

"There is no haste, Mr. Ames. I have suffered all my life from the ill considered and hurried work of professional men. As for my chimneys, I beg that you give me the result of your most serious deliberations. At this hour I ride. Cecilia, will you dress immediately and accompany me?"

She disappeared at once, and I stared mutely after her. I am by no means an idler, and this cool indifference to the value of my time would ordinarily have enraged me, but I believe I laughed, and when I turned to Cecilia I found her smiling.

"I'm glad Mr. Ames, that you are a person of humor. It is no joke that my aunt is a believer in thoroughness, and one of these days when she is ready to talk of chimneys she will subject you to a most rigid examination."

"One of these days? Why, I have looked at the timetable, and it is my present intention to take the 12:03 into town. I have appointments at my office for the afternoon. I assure you, Miss Hollister, that I'm a man of engagement, particularly at this season."

I remembered what Jewett had told me of Fortner, the painter, and his detention at Newport by Miss Octavia Hollister. I had no intention of being immured in any such fashion, and I was about to protest further when Cecilia took a step toward me and after a glance at the door spoke in a low tone and with great earnestness.

"Mr. Ames, I have every reason to believe that you are a gentleman, and in that confident belief I'm going to ask a favor of you. You have said that you know Hartley Wiggins well."

"I know no man better. You might not have inferred it from his manner last night, but he was undoubtedly surprised and embarrassed by my presence and did not act quite like himself."

"I think I understand the cause of that. If I should ask you to see him today and give him a message for me could you do so?"

"It will be an honor to serve you and a very simple matter, as I should see him on my own account if he is still in the neighborhood."

"He is doubtless at the Prescott Arms. My message is a verbal one. Please urge him not to make any effort to see me and not to call here again. But at the same time, as the chimney smoked just as we were about to be left alone last night, I think—I think"—she hesitated a moment—"you may say that his interests have not been jeopardized by his temerity in calling."

In her pause before concluding this curious commission here eyes searched mine deeply, and I felt that she had not lightly entrusted me with this singular errand. Her dark eyes held mine an instant after she had spoken. Then she smiled, and her face showed relief.

"Ask for anything you want. Aunt Octavia despises motors, so there's no car here, but you will find plenty of horses and traps. Order whatever pleases you. I shall expect to meet you at dinner if not at luncheon, and so"—she smiled again—"will Aunt Octavia."

She nodded to me from the door, and I heard her running lightly upstairs.

"Your presence there is not a laughing matter."

"I confess that I took it for granted you were not there wholly on professional errand, and I won't Ames, that I was not pleased you."

"You honor me in assuming might aspire to the hand of so did a woman as Cecilia Hollister but, my dear Wiggins, I tell never laid eyes on her until night."

"But you had been to the A do," he persisted, hacking awkwardly at his stick.

"Of course I had. I told you I told you the whole story. I did not see Cecilia Hollister. She wasn't there. I fancy that you saw her there last spring became infatuated with her and allowed her to Europe instead of to Dakota to harvest your blo wheat—after that bit of history never returned to the Aso Your lack of frankness in all has pained me, and you left it gossiping chap like Jewett to tell the whole story."

He threw the stick at a sp whose chirp irritated him from stone fence beyond us and toward me a countenance of dejection, humiliation and despair were written large.

"Hang it all!" he bellowed believe I'm losing my mind. I know what I'm doing. That old man up there is responsible for this. She's as crazy as a March—crazier! And she's made a perfect fool of that girl. I tell you Cecilia Hollister is the grandest girl in the world."

"Go it, son! Those descendants Caesar's legions at work in the down there are pausing to Try to affect calmness if you feel it. I agree to all you say Miss Cecilia, and please get it your noddle that I have no intention of becoming your rival for her. But I must beg of you also to speak in such terms of her. in this house would give me the greatest pleasure. I should look upon a ghost's appearance at Hopefield Manor as a great compliment. If any reputable, decent ghost should by any chance take up his residence in this house I should give him every encouragement."

Miss Hollister seemed to have forgotten the proposed game of billiards. The chimney's lawless demonstration had, in fact, given a new turn to the evening. We discussed ghosts for half an hour, and then, without having enjoyed any opportunity for a single private word with Cecilia, Wiggins rose to leave. He shook hands all round and bowed from the door. It was in my mind to follow, making a pretext of walking with him to the station or of helping him find his car, but nothing in his good night to me encouraged such attentions, and as I pondered the outer door closed upon my irresolution.

At the stroke of 10 Miss Hollister rose and excused herself. "We breakfast at 8, Mr. Ames. I trust the hour does not conflict with your habits."

I assured her that the hour was wholly agreeable, and she gave me her hand with great dignity.

When I turned toward Cecilia she had moved to a seat close by the hearth and was gazing dreamily into the fire, now a bed of glowing coals.

"It was odd," I remarked.

"You mean the chimney?"

"Yes. It was quite unaccountable. I confess that I never knew a chimney's mood to change so abruptly."

She sat silent for several minutes and then she lifted her head and her eyes met mine.

"Pardon me, Mr. Ames, but did my aunt ask you here to examine the chimneys? I didn't quite understand. We have been here only a week; the weather has been warm, and I believe the fire had not been lighted before today. You will pardon my frankness, but I can't quite understand why my aunt invited you here if you came professionally. I thought when you appeared this afternoon that you were a guest—nothing more—or less."

"You had heard nothing of any trouble with the fireplaces? Then I am in the dark as much as you. As I understood it, I was called here to examine the flues; but, now that I think of it, she did not say explicitly that her chimneys were behaving badly, though that was, of course, implied. I naturally assumed that she summoned me here in my professional capacity. I was a stranger to your aunt; she would hardly have invited me otherwise. I imagine, however, that your aunt acts a good deal on impulse. Her asking me here may have been only a whim."

"Please don't imagine that your coming was not been agreeable to me," Cecilia protested. "My aunt is quite capable of inviting a stranger to the house. She met you, I believe, at the Asolando. I hope you understand that it is only because I am in deep trouble, Mr. Ames, trouble of the gravest nature, that I have ventured to speak to you in this way of my aunt, for whom I have all respect and affection."

She had never, I was sure, been lovelier than at this moment. Her eyes filled, but she lifted her head proudly. Whatever the trouble might piece. Her Swedish maid stood by with a formidable pad of paper, keeping score. A boy pulled the trap for her, and she threw up her gun and blazed away with a practiced hand. Her small, slight, tense figure, awaiting the launching of the target, the quick upbring of the gun as she sighted, and the pause following the firing of the shot, in which she bent forward rigidly watching the result, were features of a picture which I would not have missed.

I will write it down here and be done with it, that it had been my good fortune to know many delightful women, but I have never known one more interesting or charming than Miss Octavia Hollister. The spirit of deathless youth was in her heart, and youth's gay pennants fluttered about her as the reports of her gun fell cheerily upon the crisp morning air, a rebuke and a challenge to all indolent souls.

I made myself presentable as quickly as possible and went forth to report to her. She nodded pleasantly as I greeted her immediately after she had scored a capital shot. A second gun was produced, and I saw that it was not without satisfaction that she observed my lack of prowess. One out of five was the best I could do, whereas she smashed three with the greatest ease.

"If I had known you would be up so early I should have sent coffee to your room," she remarked as we walked toward the house. "Very likely your lack of luck with the birds is attributable entirely to the impoverished state of your stomach."

Breakfast was served on a delightful sun porch that I had not before seen. Cecilia appeared promptly, having, in fact, been gathering fall flowers for some time. I judged, from the considerable armful of chrysanthemums, asters, dahlias and marigolds which we found her arranging for the table. She seemed in excellent spirits and greeted us most amiably.

The mail arrived and was placed by Miss Hollister's plate before we left the table. She opened first a bulky envelope containing cuttings from a clipping bureau, and she mused aloud upon these as she read:

"This persistent story of a sunken galleon off the Bolivian coast sounds plausible, but I fear it is the work of some bright young journalist. Our minister in that benighted country doesn't take any stock in it. I had a cable from him yesterday."

She handed Cecilia a number of letters, which the girl opened and then to my surprise meekly turned over to her aunt. Miss Hollister surveyed them critically.

"I thought," she remarked, "that that young Henderson who was so attentive to you at Madrid was an imposter, and this note settles the matter. He flirted outrageously with Ezekiah behind your back. He asks if he may call upon you here. If he were the nephew of Colonel Abner Henderson of Roanoke, as he represented himself to be, he would not ask if he might call upon you, but would have appeared at once in his proper person to pay his addresses. As for these other gentlemen, we need not discuss them. Their actions must speak for them."

Miss Hollister, having thus dismissed her niece's correspondents, rose and led the way to the library. Cecilia seemed in no wise depressed by her aunt's fling at Mr. Henderson, whoever he might be, but threw the

"Ask me anything you want. Aunt Octavia despises motors, so there's no car here, but you will find plenty of horses and traps. Order whatever pleases you. I shall expect to meet you at dinner if not at luncheon, and so"—she smiled again—"will Aunt Octavia."

She nodded to me from the door, and I heard her running lightly upstairs.

Left to my own devices I rang the bell and ordered the library fire extinguished and the hearth cleaned. This required a little time, but the house man obeyed me readily, and soon, clad in my professional overalls and jumper, I was going carefully over the flue whose behavior had been so unaccountable the previous night. Guided by the servant, I inspected the three fireplaces in the upper chambers that were served by flues in this chimney and finally dropped my torch and plumb line from the chimney pot. Never in all my experience had I seen better flues. But I had the ashes thrown out of the dump in the cellar and found the chute in perfect order. I learned by inquiry that the other flues worked perfectly, but I nevertheless scrutinized them carefully. My freedom of the house afforded an excellent opportunity for a study of its beautiful construction. It was modern in every sense, with no dark, mysterious corners in which goblins might lurk.

My professional labors were finished. I was quite ready for Miss Hollister's most searching inquiries. As for the library flue, I had decided that a little care in piling the logs in the hearth would obviate the possibility of any recurrence of the difficulty. And I thereupon hurried to my room and after a tub (my vocation encouraged frequent tubbing) chose from the stable a neat trap for one horse. Thus equipped I set out to find Wiggins at the Prescott Arms.

As I drove into the entrance I saw Wiggins pacing the long veranda. He waved a hand and came out to meet me, and when I had rid myself of the trap he suggested that we take a walk.

His manner was not cordial, and he wore the jagged look of a man on bad terms with his pillow. I attributed his appearance to preoccupation with his love affair. When we had withdrawn a little way from the inn he turned on me sharply.

"Well?" he demanded.

"Well," I laughed.

"Oh, you needn't take that tone about it! Your being here is something that requires explanation, and your being there"—he flung out his arm toward Hopefield Manor—"your presence there is not a laughing matter."

"My dear Wiggins, I came here in a spirit of friendship, and you treat me like a pickpocket. I must say that if you had not acted like a clam the other night at the club, but had told me what was in the wind we might not be meeting now like ancient enemies instead of old and intimate friends."

He vouchsafed no reply, but threw himself down under a scarlet maple and began to whittle a stick, while I went on with my story, concluding with:

"And now I have finished my work, and after I have made my report I shall probably not meet her again. As for Miss Cecilia Hollister, I can only say, my dear Wiggins, that she is a rarely beautiful woman, and that if you wish to marry her you have my very best wishes for your success and happiness."

"It struck me that you were pretty well established there," he blurted, feeling it. I agree to all you! Miss Cecilia, and please get it your noddle that I have no int of becoming your rival for her. But I must beg of you also to speak in such terms of her. She is the most delightful woman I ever met."

"Mad, I tell you, quite mad tell you, Ames, that woman is a violent being. She's perfectly ish."

There is no way of answer man in this humor save by law and I laughed long and loud, consternation of the Italian laborers, who were now swat their luncheons a short distance from us.

Wiggins sullied awhile and addressed me seriously.

"I didn't tell you I was abroad, because the situation explanation difficult. I could tell you that I was about to race Europe after a waitress I had a tea-room. You're always so fondly suspicious. It would an odd sound even now if she—well, if she were a waitress of what you know her to be. my animosity toward Miss O Hollister is due to the fact that I had been so courteous to her summer long as I could. I thought myself tolerably established in mind as a decent person and a friend, she suddenly sluts (up in that house—bought it on pose. I fancy—and Cecilia her compelled to take on an air of tery, warning me to keep away gesting the darkest possibilities giving me no hint whatever reason for her conduct."

Let us confine ourselves to Octavia for a moment. While were acting as cavalier to her abroad she was friendly—the suddenly changed. Now there be some explanation of that."

"Well, for one thing, she fl at a tangent about my ancestor were in Berlin on the Fourth o and got to talking about the can revolution. She asked me my people had done for the pa cause. The painful fact is that of them were Tories, but my grandfather broke with his father, brothers, joined Washington's and fought through the whole ness. But to save the feelings rest of them, who went to Et till it was all over, he change name. There's no mention of the war records anywhere. I've experts working on it, but they find any trace of him. He was ly embittered by the estrang from his people, and though h a farm in this very neighb somewhere—I've thought some I'd look it up and try to get h it—he never mentioned his m experiences even to his own ch. Usually Miss Hollister changes if you give her time. I've hea say that we'd have been better we'd never broken with Englan she persists in prodding that place in my arm."

"From what you say Cecilia not repelled you. On the other she has frankly given you to stand that you must not press suit at this time for reasons sh fit to withhold. A little more ence, a little calm deliberation, less violent language, and i course the girl is yours. Now, do you fancy is the cause of Ce abrupt change of attitude?"

He refused to meet my eyes turned away as though to cono embarrassment whose cause I not surmise. When he spoke i in a voice husky with emotion.

"Am I a c? Am I beneath contempt of decent people?"

"It's possible, Wiggy, that you are.
Go on with it."

"Well, you know," he began diffi-dently, "Cecilia has a sister."

I grinned, but his scowl brought me to myself again.

"Yes. And her name is Hezekiah.
The name pleases me."

"She was with Miss Octavia in her gallop over Europe, so I saw a good deal of her necessarily. She is younger than Cecilia. She's a good deal of a kid—that sort that never grows up,
you know."

"Just like her Aunt Octavia."

"Bah! Don't mention that woman.
Hezekiah is a very pretty girl, and I suppose—well, when you are thrown with a girl that way, seeing her constantly"—

I clapped my hand on his knee as the light began to dawn upon me.

"You old rascal! You don't need to add a single word. I dare say you are guilty. I can see it in your eye.
After waiting till you reached years of discretion before beginning an attack upon womankind you began mowing them down in platoons. So they come running now that you've got a start. Oh, Wiggy! And I believed you immune! And you're trying to drive 'em tandem."

"That, you shameless wretch, would be a sufficient reason for Miss Octavia's aloofness—your double faced dealing with her nieces. You confirm my impression that she is a wise woman. And Cecilia, I take it, may be deeply embarrassed by her sister's infatuation for you. You certainly have made a tangle of things, you heart wrecker, you conscienceless deceiver! But where may I ask,
does this Hezekiah keep herself?"

"Oh, she's with her father. They have a bungalow over the hills there, several miles from Hopefield Manor."

"Well, I hope you are no longer toying with her affections. Of course you don't see her any more?"

"Well, he mumbled, "I did see her this morning. But I couldn't help it. It was the merest chance. I met her in the road when I was out taking a walk. She's always turning up. She's the most unaccountable young person."

He rose and flung up his arms despairingly. It was much easier to laugh at Wiggins than to be angry at him, but I delivered the message which Cecilia had intrusted to me,
and this, I thought, might give him some comfort.

"She told you to see me?"

"She certainly did. I confess that my message doesn't seem luminous,
but I have a feeling that she meant to be kind. It may be that she is giving you time to disentangle yourself from the delectable Hezekiah's meshes. I can't elucidate. I merely convey information. But answer honestly if you can, has Cecilia ever refused you?"

"No," he replied grimly; "she's never given me the chance!"

CHAPTER VII.

I Meet Hezekiah.

WIGGINS asked me to luncheon, and on the way back to the inn, after inquiring my plans for returning to town,
he proposed that I delay my departure until the following day. What he wanted, and he put it bluntly, was a friend at court, and as I had seemingly satisfied him of my entire good faith and of my devotion to his interests he begged that I prolong my stay in Miss Hollister's house, giving as my excuse
the condition of the chimneys of Hope-field Manor. He brushed aside my plea of other engagements and appealed to our old friendship. He was tak-feared at times that Miss Octavia favored him."

"Possibly, but not likely. But how long is this thing going to last? If you fellows are going to hang on here until Miss Cecilia Hollister has chosen
one of you for her husband I shudder for your nerves. I imagine that any one of these gentlemen is likely to begin shooting across his plate at any minute. Such a situation would become intolerable very quickly if I were in the game and forced to lodge here."

"I hope," replied Wiggins with heat,
"that you don't imagine these fellows can crowd me out. I've paid for a month's lodging in advance, and if you will stand by me I'm going to win."

"Spoken like a man, my dear Wiggins! You may count on me to the sweet or bitter end, even if I pull down all the superb chimneys with which Lepperton adorned that house up yonder."

He silently clasped my hand. A little later I telephoned from the inn to my office explaining my absence and instructing my assistant to visit several pressing clients, and I instructed the valet at the Hare and Tortoise to send me a week's supply of linen and an odd suit or two.

At about 3 o'clock I left Wiggins in first rate spirits and set out on my return to Hopefield Manor.

I made a wrong turn on leaving the Prescott Arms, and I came out presently near Katonah village. I got my bearings of a shopkeeper and started again for Hopefield Manor, but the mid-afternoon was warm, and the hills were steep, and as Miss Hollister's admirable cab showed signs of weariness,
I drove into a fence corner and loosened
the mare's check. On a sunny slope several hundred yards above the highway lay an orchard, advertised to the larcenous eye by the reddish of red apples. Not in many years had I robbed an orchard, and I felt irresistibly drawn toward the guarded trees, which were still, in their old age, abundantly fruitful.

I drove down a bough and plucked
my first apple, tasted and found it good. At my palate's first responsive titillation something whizzed past my ear, and, following the flight of the missile, I saw an apple of goodly size fall and roll away into the grass. I had imagined myself utterly alone,

and even now as I looked guiltily around no one was in sight. The apple had passed my ear swiftly and at an angle quite un-Newtonian. It had been fairly aimed at my head, and the law of gravitation did not account for
it. As I continued my scrutiny of the landscape I was addressed by a voice whose accents were not obnoxious.
Further, the tone was most natural.

away the core.

"I mentioned soup," she remarked.
"The courses are mixed. We have partaken of fruit. Are you fish, flesh, fowl or good red herring?"

"Daughter of Eve, I will be anything you like. I'm obliged for the apple, and I apologize for having entered Eden uninvited."

"It's not my Eden. Nobody invited me. But it's not too much to say that these apples are grand."

"I'm glad we're both in the same boat. I'm a trespasser myself. I don't even know the name of the owner.
But if you have had only one apple
two more are coming to you if you follow Atalanta's precedent."

"I don't follow precedents, and I've forgotten the name of the boy who threw the apples in the race. It doesn't matter, though. Nothing matters very much."

Her hands clasped her knees. Her skirt was short, and I was conscious that she wore tan shoes. She continued to regard me with lazy curiosity. She seemed younger than at the Asolando. Not more than eighteen times had apples reddened on the bough in her lifetime. She was even slenderer and more youthful in her sweater than in the snowy vestments of the Asolando. Her hair, which in the glow of the lamp at Asolando cash desk had been golden, was today burnished copper and was brushed straight back from her forehead and tied with a black ribbon.

"I quite agree with your philosophy.
Nothing is of great importance."

"So it's not your orchard?" she asked.

"The thought flatters me. I own no lands nor ships at sea. I'm a chimney doctor, and if necessary I'll apologize for it."

"You needn't submit testimonials. I take the swallows out of my own chimneys."

"That requires a deft hand, and I'm sure you're considerate of the swallows."

"You may come up here and sit on the wall if you care to. I saw you driving in a trap. I hope your horse isn't afraid of motors. Motors speed scandalously on that road."

"I am not in the least worried about my horse. It's borrowed. As you remarked, this is a nice orchard. I like it here."

He brushed aside my plea of other engagements and appeal- ed to our old friendship. He was tak- ing his troubles hard, and I felt that he really needed counsel and support in the involved state of his affairs. I did not see how my continued pres- ence under Miss Hollister's roof could materially assist him, and the thought of remaining there when there was no work to be done was repugnant to my sense of professional honor, but he was so persistent that I finally yielded.

While we ate luncheon I sought by every means to divert his thoughts to other channels. After we were seated in the dining room four other men fol- lowed, exercising considerable care in placing themselves as far from one an- other as possible. A few moments later a motor hummed into the driveway, and we heard its owner ordering his chauffeur to return to town and hold himself subject to telephone call. This latest arrival appeared shortly in the dining room and, surveying the rest of us with a disdainful air, sought a table in the remotest corner of the room. Others appeared, until eight in all had entered. The presence of these men at this hour, their air of aloofness and the care they exercised in isolating themselves interested me. They ap- peared to be gentlemen. They were, indeed, suggestive of the ampler met- ropolitan world, and one of them was unmistakably a foreigner.

While Wiggins appeared to ignore them, I was conscious that he reviewed the successive arrivals with every manifestation of contempt. One of these glum gentlemen seemed familiar. I could not at once recall him, but something in his manner teased my memory for a moment before I placed him. Then it dawned upon me that he was the third man I had met in the field overhanging the garden after my eavesdropping experience the day before. I thought it as well, however, not to mention this fact, or to speak of the man I had seen so grimly posted in the midst of the cornfield. I was an observer, a looker on, at Hopefield, and my immediate business was the col- lecting of information.

"Will you kindly tell me, Wiggy, who these strange gentlemen are and just what has brought them here at this hour?"

"I know them—they are guests of the inn. Most of them were more or less companions in our procession across Europe last summer. The one in the tan suit is Henderson—you must have heard of him. The short dark chap of atrabilious countenance is John Stewart Dick, who pretends to be a philoso- per. As for the others"—

He dismissed them with a jerk of the head. My wits struggled with his ex- planation. It is my wish to reduce in- formation to plain terms.

"Are these gentlemen, then, your ri- vals for the hand of Miss Cecilia Hol- lister? If so, they are a solemn band of suitors, I must confess."

"You have hit it, Ames. They are suitors, assembled from all parts of the world."

"Nice looking fellows, except the chap with the monocle, who has just ordered rather more liquor than a gen- tleman should at this hour."

Soup of the evening, beautiful soup!

It was then that, lifting my eyes, I beheld, sitting lengthwise of the wall, with her feet drawn comfortably un- der her, a girl in a white sweater, bareheaded, munching an apple. There was no question of identity. It was the girl whose head behind the cas- hler's grill of the Asolando had inter- ested me on the occasion of my sec- ond visit to the tea room. In soliciting my attention by reciting a line of verse she had merely followed the rule of the tea room in like circum- stances. The casting of the apple at my head possessed the virtue of nov- elty. "They rush by thousands to see Tom Thumb," wrote the disappointed painter in his diary. "Their eyes are open, but their sense is shut. It is an insanity, a rabies, a madness, a furor, a dream!" Another entry later on runs: "Tom Thumb had 12,000 people last week. R. R. Haydon 133½ (the half a little girl). Exquisite taste of the English people!"

The first edition of Browning's "Paul- ine" was sold at auction for $2,400, yet not only did Browning receive nothing for it originally, but he would have withdrawn it from print if it had been possible. Yet so highly did Rossetti think of this despised masterpiece that, not being able to find a copy else- where, he went to the British museum library and spent several laborious days copying it word for word.

BARGAINING AS A FINE ART.

Polite and Loquacious, the Oriental Shopkeeper Will Haggle Over the Price of an Article From Dawn Until Dark—A Sample Transaction.

He is the selfsame fellow still, the Cairene merchant, as in the days of Haroun-al-Raschid. He squats in cross legged contentment as of yore, amenable only to the loquacious system of bargaining dear to the heart of the oriental. The western tourist, foolishly regarding time as of value, will lose all equanimity long before he has completed the smallest transaction. If his knowledge of the east and his patience suffice and he begins negotiations early enough in the day not to be driven forth as the merchant sets up his shutters at nightfall he may obtain the article he seeks at a just and equitable price. If he gains possession of it in less than the accustomed time he will certainly have paid more than its market value.

Vagamundo, the western traveler experienced in the ways of the east, catches sight during a stroll through the bazaars of an Arabic blade that takes his fancy. It hangs high at the top of the open booth, on the raised floor of which serenely squats the proprietor, with folded legs. Vagamundo, as from the merest curiosity, pauses to run his eye over the countless articles, suggests with a half stifled yawn that the scimitar looks like what might be a convincing weapon in the hands of an enemy, ventures to hope that the merchant is enjoying fine weather and strolls leisurely on. The shopkeeper continues to puff drowsily at his water bottle until the westerner is all but out of earshot. Then he appears suddenly to awake and drones out a languid invitation to return. Vagamundo pays no heed to the summons for some moments, gazes abstractedly upon the wares displayed in another booth, then wanders slowly back. The merchant hopes that the traveler is enjoying the best of health, invites him to squat in the bit of space not already occupied by himself or his wares, offers a cigarette and falls to discussing the state of the cotton crop in the delta. By the time the second cigarette is lighted he turns the conversation deftly to the scimitar and remarks that though it is hung among his wares rather for ornament than for sale it is possible he may some day tire of beholding it and part with it for—perhaps 1,000 piasters. Vagamundo, puffing reminiscently for a time, recalls having heard a friend express a desire to obtain such a weapon for, say, 75 piasters or so and wonders, after all, why that friend should care for so useless an article. The shopkeeper regrets that the two prices named do not more nearly coincide, trusts that the inundations will not be so late this year as last and reaches again for the tube of his narghile. Vagamundo expresses his delight that the khedive has recovered from his recent attack, thanks the merchant for his disinterested hospitality and saunters away.

The shortest instant before he is finally lost from view in the surging stream of bazaar loungers he is called back to learn that the merchant is of the opinion that the new land tax will work more effectively than the old, that the scimitar is probably worth only 750 piasters and that some of the eucalyptus trees in the Esbekleh gardens are to be removed. With all due respect to Cromer Pasha Vagamundo doubts the practicability of his latest scheme of taxation and hopes that his friend may somewhere run across such a scimitar at 100 piasters.

Thus the transaction continues; a third, a fourth, even a fifth time Vagamundo returns. By the sixth visit he has dropped the notion of a friend and openly offers 225 piasters for the blade, and the shopkeeper arouses himself sufficiently to take the weapon down for inspection and expresses a willingness to part with it for 275.

Over newly rolled cigarettes the negotiation proceeds, now touching upon the prevalence of ophthalmia, anon skirting the matter of scimitars, their manufacture and price. Speaking of scimitars, the merchant suspects that for the one in hand he would be satisfied perhaps at 250 piasters. Vagamundo lays that sum—which both recognized from the beginning as the just price—on the mat between them, grasps his newly acquired property and, amid protestations of lifelong friendship from the merchant, takes his departure.

Manchester business men and Chicago captains of industry, scornful such childish methods, have dived into the maelstrom of the bazaars of Cairo with the avowed intention of "doing business" after the manner of today and the west; but all in vain. The Cairene shopkeeper will hurry in his transactions for no mortal man. Let the pulsating westerner press his mercenary suit too forcibly and he discovers to his surprise, and perhaps even to his dismay, that the merchant of the east displays his wares and squats by day among them merely as a recreation and amusement and that the notion of selling anything is farthest from his thoughts.—Harry A. Franck in Century.

To forgive a fault in another is more sublime than to be faultless oneself.

THE OPIUM EVIL

The Chinese Government is Battling Hard for Its Eradication.

Last February a man named Hsi, residing in Lanehowfu, the capital of Kansu Province, China, was arrested with two coffins in his possession containing the bodies of near relatives, around which were packed 4,000 ounces of opium, which he was taking with the corpses into Shansi, an adjacent city. It is the custom of the Chinese to take their dead in huge wooden coffins back to the place of their birth.

The prisoner was tried and sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment. The case was then referred to the central government in Peking and the man was sentenced to death. The execution has just taken place, the prisoner being shot instead of decapitated, as was the practice in the old days.

In connection with the suppression of the use of opium, rumors are continually afloat concerning the drastic measures which the government is able to enforce in spite of the disorganization it is experiencing as a result of the revolution. Reports tell frequently of fighting between farmers who have formed bands and armed themselves with the object of successfully harvesting a crop of opium. Sometimes the reports tell of Christians being made special objects of attack and even murdered because they oppose the growing of the poppy. The rule of keeping hands off the missionary and his property, however, is still generally observed, as it was throughout the revolution.

Other reports tell of proclamations threatening death for a third offense in selling or smoking opium. Still others tell of great stocks of the drug being burned amid worth of celebrations. Some $25,000 worth of confiscated opium went up in smoke in Tientsin a few weeks ago, while bands played and people drank tea and listened to speeches telling of the harm opium had done the Chinese. It is believed by foreigners and Chinese alike that such drastic measures would not be possible at this period of reconstruction tell of great feasts of the drug being burned amid worth of celebrations. Some $25,000 worth of confiscated opium went up in smoke in Tientsin a few weeks ago, while bands played and people drank tea and listened to speeches telling of the harm opium had done the Chinese. It is believed by foreigners and Chinese alike that such drastic measures would not be possible at this period of reconstruction if the feeling of the nation were not in favor of the reform.

The restriction of the importation and growth has caused the value of opium in China to be enormously enhanced. Those who persist in using it must now do so not only in secret but at prices which only the rich can afford. It is now said to be beyond the reach of the poor man, selling as it does for many times what it cost before the suppression began. In consequence there are great inducements to carry on the trade illicitly and much smuggling and growing in remote hill countries is attempted.

The cleverness of the Chinese police in discovering smuggled shipments is shown by the instance given above of the big burning at Tientsin. But in the country they are not always so clever and many reports of fields of growing poppy come to the government notice directly or indirectly through foreign missionaries and their converts.

One of the mysteries still unsolved is that of the sense by which the lower animals become aware of the approach of earthquakes. For three or four days before the recent severe earthquakes at Guadalajara, Mexico, the many parrots of the city showed great and unusual restlessness, and during the period of disturbance the increased cries of the birds gave warning of the nearness of the worst shocks. Rats also became alarmed, fleeing from the city before the earthquakes came. Supersensitiveness to faint shocks hardly gives satisfactory explanation, for modern seismographs are very sensitive, and it is quite unlikely that tremors too slight to be recorded would be felt so strongly as to give

Gas In Trees.

An interesting phenomenon, says a writer in American Forestry, is the escape of gas from cavities at the base of hardwood trees in the Ozarks, when the trees are cut down. "When the cavities are cut into the gas escapes with a whistling sound, and if lighted it will burn with a faint yellow flame." Decomposition of the heart wood of the tree is supposed to cause the formation of the gas.

FALL FANCIES.

Styles In Tailor Made That Will Be In Evidence Later On.

Fall suit coats will vary considerably in length. The plain models will be shorter than the dressy ones, for the latter reach to the knees in the back. The broken waist line which was universal in the spring is being retained in fall models, many of which repeat the cutaway effects with which we are familiar. With these will be worn fancy waistcoats in a contrasting material. It must be remembered that these decisions in regard to length are the ones reached by American makers. It is not at all improbable that later the Paris designers may launch short coats especially for semidress occasions, although they now feature those of three-quarter length.

There is some prospect that the three tiered skirt which has been so successful in silk and in cotton materials may be repeated in modified form in woolen fabrics. If that happens it is inevitable that a special short coat, or coatee, will be devised to accompany these skirts.

On the subject of sleeves, too, there may be a diversity of opinion between the French and the American makers. The latter have committed themselves to the kimono type in waists, while our advices from Paris say that over there the fullness under the arms is disappearing. The designers of this country seem to be of the same opinion when it comes to coats, as they recommend long, close fitting sleeves without any fullness in the armhole.

The suit pictured is one of the new things Paris has sent over for autumn. The skirt is a slightly draped affair in a striped black and white cloth and the jacket, a cutaway model, is in black broadcloth.

BIGGEST BIRD IN THE WORLD.

The Ostrich, Whose Feathers Have Been Sought For Centuries.

The ostrich is a bird long of leg and short of brain. If it ran in a straight line, a man would require a 60-horse power automobile to catch it. It runs in long curves and men on horseback catch it by cutting corners. The high cost of living does not affect ostriches much. They like rich grasses and almost any vegetation, but in the hard times eat nails, tin cans, parasols and other useless things. A full grown ostrich reaches the height of six to eight feet, and it is the largest bird now extant. The ostrich has wings but they are of no use in flying. In fact, the ostrich is not a flying bird anyway; it belongs to the class of running birds. What wings it has are used chiefly in volplaning over the Arabian deserts when the bird is pursued. Running and extending its wings, an ostrich, it is estimated, can cross the sands at the rate of 60 miles an hour.

Although the hen ostrich lays eggs that weigh about three pounds apiece, thus being equal to a couple of dozen of ordinary hen's eggs, the bird is valued especially for the fine crop of plumage it grows. Ostrich tips have been valued in the millinery art since the days of the Roman emperors. At the spectacles in the arenas at Rome many ostriches were exhibited, and their brains were considered a delicacy on the table of Heliogabalus.

So well known are ostrich feathers that they have become figures in heraldry. Three white ostrich feathers are the well known insignia of the Prince of Wales. Tradition ascribes their use in that particular to Edward, the Black Prince, who is said to have plucked a plume of ostrich feathers—not from the tail of an ostrich—but from the casque of John of Luxemburg, King of Bohemia, who fell by his hand at Crecy. Prior to that time, however, ostrich plumes seem to have been taken by the House of Plantagenet as the official insignia. Ever since the early days of heraldry and chivalry the plumes of the ostrich have been esteemed as ornaments of headgear, nor does their use decrease. Ladies in the twentieth century are as eager to have nodding ostrich plumes above their heads as kings and princes were in the days gone by. Knights Templar employ the plumes on their chapeaux and the plumed knights with glittering swords are among the most picturesquely uniformed bodies we have.

Ostrich farming has been found profitable in many parts of the world. In South Africa great ranches exist where the birds are raised for their plumage, which is plucked twice a year. The feathers are worth about $125 a pound, the price sometimes ranging as high as $250. There are 24 large feathers on each wing of the male bird. It may be seen, therefore, that there is good money in ostrich farming. Colonies of the birds have also subsisted in various parts of the United States and in other countries. The fact that the birds pick up their own living when given wide enough range, that it is necessary only to pluck the feathers and market them, makes ostrich farming an easy and profitable business, albeit somewhat perilous, because the legs of the ostrich, wonderfully strong in running, are dangerous weapons of defence and a blow from the two-toed foot has been known to knock a man down and rip him open. Ostrich farmers use forked sticks to hold the heads of the birds to the earth while they relieve them of their plumage.

Ostrich feathers do not come from the ranches fine and white and curly as we see them on my lady's hat. On

"Fruit-a-tives"

HULL, QUE., DEC. 24th, 1909
"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. I could not digest my food and everything caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation and at times, I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks.

Three doctors attended me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicine but did me no good. My weight came to only 80 pounds and everyone thought I was going to die. Finally, I had the good fortune to try "Fruit-a-tives" and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy, I steadily improved.

Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds, and this is more than I ever weighed even before my illness.

I attribute my cure solely and entirely to "Fruit-a-tives" and can never praise them too much for saving my life. To all who suffer from Dyspepsia and Constipation, I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" as a miraculous remedy."

MARRY TO BECOME MEN.

In Korea Males Are Looked Upon as Children Until They Wed.

The Koreans marry very young, generally between the ages of twelve and fifteen. For a woman to reach twenty without marrying is considered a terrible thing. A peculiarity of these weddings is that they would appear to be a matter of interest to every one except the parties mostly concerned, who often see one another for the first time on the wedding morning. This is because in a Korean household the boys are kept apart from the girls, the father and the sons occupying the front of the house and the mother and daughters living in the rear of the establishment. Moreover, in their social life the boys are not allowed to mix with the gentler sex.

The parents and friends arrange the match in accordance with their own interests, and if both parties agree and the bargain is concluded the formalities are of the simplest. There is no religious ceremony and no legal contract.

Early on the wedding morn the best man arrives to tie the bridegroom's pigtails in a knot on the top of his head. This not only remains forever as an outward and visible sign of his condition, but entitles him to wear a hat for the first time in his life and to be treated as a man and enter public life. He may be a mere child, twelve years of age, but he has no longer any right to play with his boy friends and must choose his associates among old men.

He has now all civil rights and is expected to behave accordingly. If, on the contrary, a man is unable to afford the luxury of a home and a wife, he may reach the age of fifty, but he must still wear his pigtail down his back, has none of the advantages of citizenship and is expected to play with kites,

UNTIDY CUFFS.

Hint For Home Sewers Concerning Ready Made Blouse.

If you buy a ready made blouse of any kind you will probably find that the cuffs have no fastenings. They are generally made large enough to slip over the hands and so large that they bag about on the wrists and look very loose and untidy.

A thing of this kind is bound to spoil the appearance of any blouse, so you must alter it, of course. But there's no need to split the cuff and make the usual kind of fastening. You can get the same tidy look without wasting all that time and trouble.

Sew on two or three little buttons down the outside of the cuff, and then work loops to match them a couple of inches further along, more or less, according to the size of your wrist. The loops should be made of silk or cotton worked with buttonhole stitch.

When the blouse has been put on you just fasten the loops over the buttons, and then the cuff is drawn up so that it fits your arm quite closely. A fastening of this kind is very neat and quite easy to manage.

Remember that you must leave more space between the buttons and loops at the wrist than between the buttons and loops higher up, for the wrist part will need to be tightened a little more than the rest of the cuff.

Baked Hominy.

This is an excellent change from ordinary ways of preparing hominy. Have ready three-quarters of a cupful of hominy, a pint of water, a tablespoonful of salt, a liberal tablespoonful of butter and half a pint of rich milk. Boil the hominy in the water for twenty or twenty-five minutes, or until soft. Remove it from the fire and add the butter, salt and milk. Turn the mixture into an earthen baking dish and bake until thick and creamy. In summer it will make a delicious breakfast dish if it is served cold. It may be cooked the day before. As it is a rather "heavy" dish, some meat sandwiches only and a cup of coffee will make a hearty breakfast when served with it.

The Scriptures.

The present arrangement of the Scriptures into chapters originated in the thirteenth century with Cardinal Hugo, who devised it while making a Latin concordance. The division into verses was introduced by the celebrated printer, Robert Stephens, in his Greek Testament (1551) and in his Latin Bible (1556-7).

A Valuable Book.

Claude Lorraine's "Book of Truth," said to be one of the rarest and most valuable volumes in Europe, is owned by the Duke of Devonshire. It is worth six times as much as the "Mazarin" Bible, the most costly book that the British Museum can boast. The late duke refused an offer of £20,000 for it.

The Difference.

Harry—Do you know the difference between capital and labor?

Jack—No.

Harry—Well, if I loaned you 25-cents that would be capital, and if I tried to get it back that would be labor.

legs of the ostrich, wondrously strong in running, are dangerous weapons of defence and a blow from the two-toed foot has been known to knock a man down and rip him open. Ostrich farmers use forked sticks to hold the heads of the birds to the earth while they relieve them of their plumage.

Ostrich feathers do not come from the ranches fine and white and curly as we see them on my lady's hat. On the contrary they are a dirty gray in color, dirty in texture and coarse appearing. It requires the skill of the feather dresser's art to make of them the gorgeous plumes that are so beautiful and so expensive.

Dome Builders of Rome.

It was largely their development of the dome and the arched roof in masonry that enabled the Romans to build on a scale of daring and magnificence which has not been surpassed in our modern age of steel. Recent excavations in Nero's palace have revealed five subterranean vaulted rooms in the proximity of the dining room which were built as fish tanks and used to keep fish alive for the use of the imperial table. The vault and the dome or round roof of the Romans served the purpose of the Modern I beam and latticed roof girder as used by the present day architect and engineer.

Modest Fitzgerald.

Edward Fitzgerald was utterly careless of his fame. He lived to be an old man, yet not one in a million of his fellow countrymen regarded him as a poet, even if they had heard his name mentioned as an old chum of Alfred Tennyson. Yet he translated "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" long years before his death. He kept it "chucking about," apparently not thinking it worth publication, and when he did print a few copies nobody took any notice of it. Today it is one of the most famous poems in the world.

First He'd Heard of It.

Harry returned to Sunday school, after a long absence, on the day on which tickets for the annual picnic were distributed. He trembled in his seat when the teacher began a quiz on the lesson of the previous Sunday. Finally his turn came.

"Harry, who slew Goliath with a pebble?"

"Honest, teacher," said Harry, "I don't know; I didn't even know he was dead."—New York Press.

of age, but he has no longer any right to play with his boy friends and must choose his associates among old men.

If, on the contrary, a man is unable to afford the luxury of a home and a wife, he may reach the age of fifty, but he must still wear his pigtail down his back, has none of the advantages of citizenship and is expected to play with kites, marbles and such like. Any folly he may commit is excused in the same way as the naughtiness of a child who is not responsible for his actions.

The wedding ceremony itself is most simple. The whole function consists of a procession when the bride and bridegroom are conducted by their respective relations to a dais. There they are put face to face and probably, as already stated, see each other for the first time. They merely glance at one another, then bow, and the knot is tied indissolubly.—Wide World Magazine.

Fingers and Forks.

A New Yorker was speaking of a London horse show he attended.

"A feature of the show," he said, "was the magnificent riding of certain Arab chiefs. These chiefs gave a dinner one evening, an Arab dinner, and they ate the first course—kous kous—with their fingers.

"An Englishman asked for a fork for his kous kous. When it was brought to him a young chief said:

"I beg your pardon, but I don't see how you can bear to eat with a fork."

"I," the Englishman replied, "was about to remark that I didn't see how you could bear to eat with your fingers."

"But my fingers," said the Arab, "are clean—clean. I know it. I see to it myself. But you, sir, how can you feel sure about the cleanness of your fork?"—New York Tribune.

Japanese Festival Cars.

Most Japanese towns have a shrine or temple dedicated to the tutelary deity of the city. At Ueno, in the Iga province, several beautiful decorated cars are kept at the shrine, and figure annually in a curious procession. When the day of the festival arrives hundreds of pious worshippers drag the cars by means of ropes through the gayly decorated streets of the city—thereby, they believe, greatly pleasing the gods of the shrine. The cars are wonderful examples of Japanese decorative art, richly ornamented with gilding and lacquer work.—Wide World.

How Do You Laugh?

A French paper has discovered that a person's character is expressed in his manner of laughing. If you laugh in a "ha-ha" fashion you are frank if a man and inconstant and incapable of keeping a secret if a woman. If you laugh "heh-heh" you are neuroathenic, melancholy and skeptical. If you adopt a deeper tone and laugh in "ho-ho's" you are generous, easy going and good natured. The proper pitch for the fair sex to laugh in is "be-be," while people who laugh with a "hoo-hoo" effect should be avoided as hypocritical, scandal mongering and miserly.

Manufacturing Furrier

—and—

Ladies' Ready-to-wear

Ladies' Fur-Lined Coats

We have made special preparations to handle this class of work, and we can make you a coat to order or supply you from our very large stock of THIS year's best styles in all appropriate furs.

Men's Fur-Lined Coats

Specially selected cloth only is used in this work. Lined with the best quality Canadian Muskrats. We carry a stock of these on hand or will make to your order as desired.

Neck Pieces

In all the fashionable furs will enjoy increased popularity this season. We carry a handsome variety of the latest novelties. Also in sets, with muff to match.

Repairing and Remodelling

Our facilities for repairing and remodelling makes it possible for us to make over your old FURS into new models at lowest possible prices. Re-dyeing, repairing and remodelling of old fur garments to the newest styles receive the most careful attention as new work.

Order Early

We accept only as many orders as we can finish with credit to ourselves and satisfaction to our customers. Correctness of styles is one of the most essential features in a Fur garment. We receive the very latest approved styles from the leading fashion centres of the world.

All Furs should be cleaned at least once a year to remove the dust that accumulates while wearing or storing them. Cleaning restores their original beauty and lustre and improves their wearing quality. You may come to us with confidence in our ability to please you and confidence in the fairness of our prices. Furs received by mail will receive our most careful attention.

Rod and Gun in Canada for Nov. (Publisher, W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont.) sustains its reputation as the leading Canadian Magazine devoted to the interests of sportsmen. Big game hunting in British Columbia is described in several well written and illustrated articles: "A Labrador Room" is descriptive of a Labrador fishing village; "My Visit to an Alberta Trapper," details a successful day on the trap line; "How to Keep Game from Spoiling" contains valuable information for the hunter of big and small game; "When Riley Tied Hanlan" is by way of variety and is reminiscent of the famous Barrie Regatta when all the world's big scullers had a try-out for the Championship. The regular departments are well maintained.

IN AID OF THE MOWAT CONSUMPTIVE HOSPITAL.

A euvre and dance will be given, under the auspices of the U. E. Loyalist Chapter, I.O.D.E., in the Odd-fellows Hall, on Friday evening, Nov. 14th, at 8.30. Encourage the Chapter in its efforts to help stamp out the white plague, particularly in our own country, and at the same time enjoy a pleasant evening by attending the euvre and dance, at which there will be good music.

Trinity Church Notes.

The evangelistic services closed on Tuesday evening of this week. The services have created a deep and widespread interest. It was said that at least 1500 people—more than half the population of Napanee were packed into Trinity Church and Sunday School on Sunday evening. The congregations on Monday and Tuesday evenings were almost as large as on Sunday evening. A large number of persons of all ages have expressed their purpose to live christian lives. Evangelist Crossley created a fine impression with his singing and preaching and seems to have lost none of his old time vigor. The pastor will give a brief address on Sunday morning on "Why join the church." This will be followed by a reception service for the new converts. Let all who purpose joining the Church be present and let all the members of the congregation be present to witness the reception service. In the evening the pastor will speak on "The most important subject in the whole Bible."
